4000 Lives Believed Lost In Argentine Earthquakes

Injured Placed At 7000 as Four Shocks Demolish City of San Juan

Buenos Aires, Jan. 16 (AP).—Aid was rushed today from all over Argentina to the wrecked city of San Juan, high in the Andes, where the dead and injured from four earthquakes last night and this morning were said to number in the thousands, although no accurate check could yet be made.

(International News Service reported last night that 4000 persons were estimated to have been killed and "no less" than 7000 others injured. The estimate was made by officials of the Argentine railroad serving the wrecked district. Earlier the Buenos Aires newspaper La Critica had reported the death toll at 3500.)

Gen. Luis C. Perlinger, Minister of Interior, who is at San Juan, reported to President Gen. Pedro Ramirez that 500 bodies had been recovered thus far. He said 900 persons were gravely injured and that 4000 others were less seriously hurt.

(A Santiago, Chile, dispatch quoted advices from Argentina as saying that 5000 persons were either dead or injured. This dispatch added that Chilean President Juan Antonio Rios had offered Chilean cooperation in the rescue work.)

Victims Housed In Tents

Victims of the disaster were being taken by rail, road and plane to Mendoza, 75 miles from San Juan, where municipal and improvised army hospitals and an emergency city of 5000 army tents, thrown up overnight, received the stricken inhabitants of the almost destroyed city of 30,000.

Emergency appeals were issued for immediate shipments of drugs and other medical supplies, and word was received here that a group of Chilean doctors was preparing to fly from Santiago, about 170 miles from San Juan.

After three quakes during the night—the first at 8:39 p. m. and the next two at 2:24 and 2:28 a. m.—a fourth tremor was said to have rocked the city at approximately 8 a. m., destroying more buildings and hampering rescue work.

City 90% Destroyed

David Uriburu, interventor of San Juan, described the city as 90 per cent destroyed, including nearly all public buildings. The only important edifice spared was the Rawson Hospital which was evacuated, however, because of its shaky condition.

Troops and rescue workers continued to dig in the ruins, spurred on by the cries of persons buried in the debris. Buildings in imminent danger of collapse were blown up.

Uriburu said no official casualty

Pentagon Council Studies Voiding Of Food Contract

Cancellation of the contract between the Pentagon Post Restaurant Council and the Welfare and Recreational Association for feeding 40,000 workers in the Pentagon building was being considered, it was learned yesterday.

The council has been called for a meeting on Wednesday to consider the suggestion, although Maj. Harvey K. Allen, head of the council, would not reveal what cause of complaint there may be against the association.

A. E. Demaray, representative of the welfare association, admitted that the meeting had been called but he asserted that he did not know what complaint the members of the council might be asked to consider.

Prior to December 8, 1942, the cafeteria was operated under a contract let by the building construction contractor to W. P. McFarland. The welfare department took over after that date.

Soldier Bills to Fore

By William F. Arbogast
Associated Press Staff Writer

Servicemen and women take top billing on Capitol Hill this week with mustering-out pay and soldiers' vote legislation drawing special congressional attention in this election year.

First on the House business calendar is the mustering-out bill which possibly might be turned into a bonus measure before the lawmakers get through with it.

Debate on the bill was scheduled to open today and end tomorrow, and there were indications the House Military Committee, which wrote the measure as an amendment to a Senate-passed bill, would have difficulty holding down the maximum payment to $300.

$700 Payment Backed

A bipartisan drive developed over the weekend to boost the top payment upon discharge to $700, which exceeds by $200 the amount voted by the Senate just before Christmas, and is $200 above American Legion demands.

"Why be niggardly?" asked Representative Lemke (Republican) North Dakota, spokesman for a Democratic-Republican group advocating a sliding scale from $100 to $700. The amount would be determined by length and character of service.

Chairman May (Democrat) of Kentucky said he saw little chance of blocking amendments to the Military Affairs Committee bill, which would pay $100 to men and women with less than 60 days service and $300 to those with more than 60 days, officers above the rank of captain being excluded.

Another House group, headed by Representative Ploeser (Republican) Missouri, was ready to fight for a program to guarantee payments averaging $85 monthly for not more than 12 months after discharge, the amount

Death of Boy Mars District Snow Frolic

Death of a 2-year-old boy by drowning in a water main repair hole and scores of accidents marred Metropolitan Washington's first real snow frolic yesterday, and last night's ice-slick streets made hazardous going for pedestrians and drivers.

Tommy Grayson, 2, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand V. Grayson, 4335 S. 36th st., Arlington, strayed from his home shortly after noon to play in the snow. He was found in the water-filled hole in the 4200 block of 35th st., located in the Fairlington war housing development.

After three hours of artificial respiration administered by the boy's father and Arnold Rosen of 4201 S. 36th st., he was pronounced dead at 4 p. m.

Only Partially Protected

The hole was only partially protected by a few pieces of board and a wooden horse, according to Rosen, who found Tommy. Other neighbors said that the hole, 7 feet long by 2½ feet wide and 5 feet deep, looked like a shallow pool and might not have been recognized as a hazard even by older children. The child apparently slipped on the snow and fell headlong.

Arlington police said last night that they did not have the name of the private contractor who had dug the hole, explaining that it was not made by the Fairlington development. There are many contractors working there, police said, so they postponed investigation until today.

Plans Settled By Churchill And De Gaulle

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Jan. 16 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill, wholly recovered from a recent bout with pneumonia, has reached agreement with Gen. Charles de Gaulle on British-French National Committee cooperation toward a common victory, in a conference at Marrakech, Morocco, it was announced today.

The two leaders were said to have conferred in a "most cordial atmosphere" on such ticklish questions as the arming of De Gaulle's underground followers in France, and the government of territories ultimately to be liberated by Allied armies in France.

A French announcement said today the 73-year-old British statesman reviewed the entire question of French cooperation with the Free French leader last Wednesday.

Invasion Plans Discussed

Pending matters which the leaders had an opportunity to discuss were plans for the continental invasion, the leadership and participation of French troops, establishment of a provisional French government after the invasion, and the pending treason trials of some former French leaders on whose behalf the British and American governments are known to have made "informal inquiries."

Gen. de Gaulle reportedly discussed the urgency of sending munitions to French patriots to be used in easing the invasion through the sabotage of Nazi communications and attacks on enemy personnel.

Churchill reportedly replied that

Fateful Break Halted

Salt Water in British Pipeline Stalled Nazi El Alamein Drive

Chicago, Jan. 16.—An officer of the British Eighth Army said here yesterday that Marshal Erwin Rommel's Africa Corps broke through the El Alamien line on a 7-mile front on July 3, 1942, and rolled "almost to the gates of Alexandria" before the British stopped the Germans.

Maj. Peter W. Rainir, chief engineer in charge of the water supply for the Eighth Army in North Africa, told how on July 3 Rommel attacked the El Alamien line and breached it on a 7-mile front.

Through this gap, tanks and infantry poured toward Alexandria, only 50 miles away across the desert. They immediately were engaged by British tanks and infantry, and the outcome hung in the balance for about 24 hours. Finally the German tanks turned back, and 1100 infantrymen surrendered.

Only then did it become known that the Germans had overrun a British water supply line, had shot holes in it and had drunk their fill of the water.

But the water was salt water.

The pipeline had been a new one just installed by Major Rainir, and he had put salt water in it to test for leaks. Fresh water was too precious to risk losing through leaks. The Germans hadn't detected the fact that the water was salt until too late, because their taste had been blunted from use of brackish desert water.

Rainir said recently in a magazine article that had the Germans broken through a day earlier, there would have been no water in the pipe; that if they had broken through two days later, fresh water would have been in it.

He thinks it possible that the fact the Germans never got to Alexandria, and thus never got a chance to complete their contact with the Japanese through India, was because of the incident of the pipeline.

Rainir said that when he joined General Wavell's Army of the Nile, the predecessor of the Eighth Army, in June, 1940, it consisted of 8000 men with no big guns, tanks or airplanes. Across the desert in Libya were two well-armed Italian divisions and 2000 planes, he said.

"Wavell's army bluffed the enemy with stovepipe guns and dummy airplanes until reinforcements arrived," he added.

He expressed hope American forces which fought alongside the British Eighth Army in Tunisia, would be with the Eighth Army "when Berlin is entered."

3 Charged With Counterfeiting Gas and Sugar Ration Coupons

Free on bond, three men will face a hearing before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage tomorrow on charges of "counterfeiting ration coupons," it was learned at police headquarters last night.

After investigation by secret service and OPA agents, a plate for printing TT gasoline and sugar rationing coupons was confiscated pending the arraignment of the three men before the commissioner last Saturday. Released on bond, they are:

John C. Maimone, 38, 411 I st. ne., reported to be the proprietor of a pool room on 8th st. se.; Earl von Reichenbach, alias Rauchenberg, 37, 1418 W st. se., purportedly the owner of a filling station on Pennsylvania ave. se., and Donald Gordon Berry, 29, Bradbury Heights, Md.

The men were charged at No. 3 Precinct, police said, after Reichenbach admitted to secret service and OPA investigators that he had hired Berry to obtain gas coupons to cover up recent shortages at his filling station.

Investigations led police to Maimone's pool room they said, where the plates for counterfeiting rationing coupons were allegedly found.

New Drive Pierces Nazi Line in Soviet

Railroad Severed Near Lake Ilmen; 100,000 Germans Slain in 3 Weeks

London, Monday, Jan. 17 (AP).—Gen. Nikolai F. Vatutin's First Ukraine Army alone has killed 100,000 Germans in three weeks in a sweep carrying the Russians 55 miles inside old Poland, while to the north a powerful new Soviet offensive has cut the Novosokolniki-Dno railway below Lake Ilmen, Moscow disclosed last night.

A special broadcast-bulletin announcing the terrific German casualties—nearly 5,000 daily—on just one of five major fronts in the east also said Vatutin's men had destroyed 2204 German tanks and 1174 guns, and captured 7000 Germans in the same period between December 24 and January 13. Massive quantities of equipment also were seized.

The communique announcing the attack north of Novosokolniki said Russian forces had driven a wedge nine miles wide and five miles deep into the German lines in three days.

Moscow also disclosed that Soviet troops now were less than 19 miles from Rovno, a big rail and highway junction in Poland, were 55 miles inside the former frontier of that country in a drive toward Kovel from Sarny, and were about 47 miles from the old border in a parallel drive through the swamps of lower White Russia toward Pinsk.

Nazi Counterattacks Fail

Heavy German counterattacks also were declared beaten off in the southwestern Ukraine near Vinnitsa and Uman.

Stockholm dispatches quoted a Berlin military spokesman as saying some Russian units already had crossed the Bug River near Vinnitsa, only 20 miles from the vital Warsaw-Odessa trunk line serving Germany's huge Dnieper Bend forces.

Moscow said the Germans threw hundreds of tanks and thousands of infantrymen against the Red Army in the Vinnitsa and Uman sectors, but were repulsed. The Germans were declared to have lost 136 tanks yesterday and more than 2000 men in their desperate efforts to halt the Russian surge toward Rumania.

In the new northern offensive, Mankovo, a strong point 23 miles north of Novosokolniki, was overpowered. The Red troops swept on 3 miles to seize Nasva, a rail point below Mankovo. By seizing Nasva "our troops cut the Novosokolniki-Dno railway over which the Germans transferred their troops along the front line," said a midnight supplement.

70 Miles From Latvia

A total of 40 localities were declared taken in this new drive 70 miles east of the Latvian border in an area which is a main link in the enemy's effort to hold onto his siege lines near Leningrad, much farther north. Among the towns taken were Cherki, 2 miles southeast of Nasva, and Rovni, 4 miles to the southeast.

German propagandists reflected alarm over the new developments in the north, where any large-scale

Irish 'Haw Haw' Reported Held in Eire After 'Chute Leap

London, Jan. 16 (AP).—The office of the dominions secretary withheld comment today on what, if any, action it had taken regarding reports that German planes recently carried two Irishmen from Germany to Eire and dropped them by parachute.

An investigation was suggested yesterday by the Rev. James Little, a member of Parliament from Ulster, who asked the dominions secretary if he had any information on the mission of the two men.

The Daily Mail said the two men were John P. O'Reilly, who broadcast for the Germans as the Irish "Lord Haw Haw," and Patrick Kenny, a worker inside Germany for 10 years. The newspaper gave this version of the incident:

O'Reilly landed December 16 3 miles from his father's farm in County Claire. When he was arrested two days later he had permits to leave Germany and land in Eire, all of which were in order.

Kennedy bailed out on December 19 in a gale. He was knocked out when his parachute dragged him through two thorn fences and against a gate and he was arrested that night.

"It is likely both men now are in Mountjoy Jail in Dublin," the Daily Mail said. The newspaper quoted Sir John Maffey, British Minister in Eire, as saying the British government was kept informed.

U. S. Wins Key Hill On Cape

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Monday, Jan. 17 (AP).—Capture of Hill 660 from the Japanese at Cape Gloucester, New Britain, the taking of Sio on Huon Peninsula, New Guinea, and an air raid that smashed enemy planes and ships at Rabaul, New Britain, were listed in Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique today.

American Marines captured Hill 660 after a long and bitter struggle against scores of machinegun nests which dotted the height. The victory gave the leathernecks domination of Borgen Bay, east of the cape on the northwestern coast of New Britain.

Divebombers and torpedo planes from the Solomons left a small Japanese cruiser, a destroyer and seven cargo vessels burning in Simpson Harbor at Rabaul, the enemy base on the northeastern coast of New Britain, in a noon raid Friday.

Other planes from the Solomons struck at the Vanakanau, Lakunai and Rapopo airdromes in the Rabaul area.

The Japanese sent up from 60 to 70 intercepting planes and lost 29 in the combat which cost the Americans two bombers and eight fighter planes. Four American pilots were saved. A headquarters spokesman said 16 more enemy planes probably were destroyed.

(Tokyo broadcast an imperial headquarters communique which said that Japanese naval planes shot down 57, and possibly 18 more, out of around 160 Allied bombers which attacked Rabaul Friday. The Japanese said they lost three planes.)

The Allied count made a total of 124 Japanese aircraft shot down in raids on the Rabaul base since January 1.

The fight for Hill 660, made in deluges of rain, was described by some marines as ever more bitter than the battle for Guadalcanal.

Designated 660 because of its elevation, the hill commands a large part of the surrounding country and its possession for artillery emplacements will facilitate forcing the Japanese farther east and south of Borgen Bay.

Poles Rejected Curzon Line, Soviet Says

London, Monday, Jan. 17 (AP).—The Soviet Government stated today that the Polish government declaration of Saturday "can only be interpreted as rejection of the Curzon Line" as the basis for the Russian-Polish border settlement.

Russia on January 11 suggested that line as a possible means of solving the border dispute, stating that the Soviet Union intended to retain the western White Russia and Ukraine areas of predominantly non-Polish population which had been within Poland between 1921 and 1939.

Today's Russian statement was broadcast from Moscow by Tass, official Soviet news agency.

First Thought Noncommittal

The Polish statement Saturday was described at that time in London as being noncommittal.

The Tass broadcast said:

"In reply to a declaration made by the Polish government in London January 15, Tass is authorized to state:

"First, in the Polish declaration the question of the recognition of the Curzon Line as a Soviet-Polish frontier is entirely evaded and ignored, which can only be interpreted as a rejection of the Curzon Line."

Cites Broken Relations

"Secondly, as regards the Polish government's proposal for the opening of official negotiations between it and the Soviet government, the Soviet government is of the opinion this proposal aims at misleading public opinion, for it is easy to understand that the Soviet

Fifth Army Troops Only 2 Air Miles From Prize

Wipe Out German Remnants; French Seize More Peaks, 2 More Villages

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Jan. 16 (AP).—American troops in slashing frontal attack captured Mount Trocchio, last mountain fortress blocking the way to Cassino, today, and now overlook that bastion only 2 airline miles away, a special headquarters communique announced tonight.

Fifth Army Infantrymen stormed the height in a two-sided assault launched at 6:30 a. m. Saturday.

Beyond Cassino the rugged mountains open into a wide valley leading toward Rome.

Strongly Fortified

French troops swinging in upon Cassino from the northeast at the same time have seized two more villages and additional heights, pounding within 5 miles of the powerfully fortified German stronghold.

Attacking on a wide arc after heavy artillery bombardment, the Americans plunged to the base of 1475-foot Mount Trocchio and then swarmed up the slopes bristling with pillboxes, concrete emplacements, gun pits, trenches and dugouts.

They wiped out these positions and their embedded Nazi defenders in bitter fighting, and by nightfall Saturday had won the height, except for isolated pockets.

Throughout today they wiped out the German remnants and established themselves firmly on Mount Trocchio.

Forced Labor Used

The Germans had used Italian forced labor to build tough defenses.

Cassino is the key to the Liri Valley, where the mountainous terrain that has made the advance of the last two months painfully slow opens to a wide stretch of flatter land extending to Rome some 70 miles beyond.

Through this lane runs one of the main highways to the Eternal City—the Via Casilina.

While capture of Mount Trocchio gave the Allies the last high area in front of Cassino, there still is another mountain to be reckoned with that dominates the town on the other side.

Willkie Buttons Used to Mark Marine Grousers

New York, Jan. 16 (INS).—The mystery as to why a Marine in the southwest Pacific wrote home asking that he be sent 500 "old Wilkie buttons" from the 1940 presidential campaign was reported solved tonight.

Robert McCormick, National Broadcasting Co. correspondent in Washington, said in a broadcast that he had learned the Willkie buttons are used in a system of penalties worked out as punishment for Leathernecks deemed guilty of too much grousing.

The NBC correspondent related that when a Marine complains too much he is given a "weeping slip" entitling him to cry on the chaplain's shoulder.

When a Marine collects 10 "weeping slips," said McCormick, he is given a special badge to show what a terrible grouser he really is.

And, the NBC reporter stated, the special badge is a Willkie button.

Brunswick 'Ceased To Exist' in Raid

War Sidelights

Rocket Bomb May Be Tested On East Front

Stockholm, Jan. 16 (AP).—The Swedish press reported today the Germans may put a new "liquid air" bomb to practical test on the East Front preliminary to using it against Great Britain.

This secret rocket bomb, somewhat different from the type of rocket which has been the basis of much recent German home front propaganda, is reported about ready for war front trials. Neutral military experts reportedly have received information that the bomb is propelled to fantastic altitudes by rocket power and then glides to the target, spreading destruction for a radius of more than 400 yards.

This bomb can travel 70 miles and is released from a transport plane flying at an altitude of over 3 miles, it was said. Neutral military experts reported—although other experts were skeptical—that the rocket rises to an altitude of 30 to 37 miles before it starts to glide.

Preliminary tests were made in Austria and one eyewitness said, "it was as if bushes, trees and everything had been smashed to atoms by the blast.

"A strange-looking orange and blue flame hangs in the air for minutes afterward."

The rocket bomb is composed of three chambers. One is loaded with about 1000 pounds of "liquid air," the second with between 500 and 700 pounds of explosive fluid which drives the rocket and the third with a quicksilver detonation fuse which is set off by a radioactive salt solution.

Bombers Gather in East

London, Jan. 16 (INS).—The London Daily Express quoted the Vichy radio today as reporting that a new strategic bombing force, presumably of four-motored heavy bombers, is being built up in Soviet Russia for attacks on eastern Germany, thus far beyond the known striking range of the American and British air forces.

The broadcast suggested that the new force may be made up of British and American bombers besides Russian planes.

he would investigate, but made no definite assurances or commitments.

The De Gaullists have complained bitterly at what they claim were political reasons for withholding additional aid.

The Allied high command policy, following the advice of Gen. Henri Giraud, commander in chief of French forces, has been to send arms to trained French soldiers rather than to the underground.

Displaying his old-time vigor, the Prime Minister, wearing a wide sombrero to protect him from the desert sun, stood with De Gaulle at a military review beneath swarms of aircraft from the renovated French air force, while the native and European populace cheered.

Churchill was reported to have been deeply moved by the spectacle of a reborn French army preparing to participate in a continental invasion from the south or west.

Neutrals Report City Wiped Out And 12,000 Killed

London, Jan. 16 (AP).—The German airplane manufacturing city of Brunswick has "ceased to exist" after the RAF's 2000-ton bombing Friday night, a Stockholm dispatch declared today. Neutrals estimated that 12,000 persons were killed and 50,000 bombed out.

The RAF at the same time announced nearly 30 per cent of Leipzig's most densely built-up areas was devastated in the surprise assault of December 3.

Air activity today from Britain was restricted to offensive patrols by RAF Spitfires and Typhoons. German raiders dropped bombs last night at scattered points in England, and caused an alert in London. One raider was destroyed. At about the same time, Typhoon fighter-bombers attacked supply buildings in Brittany near Morlaix, dropping their bombs squarely on the targets from heights of 150 feet. All the planes returned.

All wave lengths of the Paris radio network left the air tonight, sometimes an indication that the RAF is carrying out a night raiding mission.

Stockholm's Aftontidningen declared the population of Brunswick, in central Germany, fled from the burning city into the Harz Mountains after the attack, the most concentrated raid in the history of aerial warfare. Many barracks for foreign workers were destroyed, the newspaper added.

The bomb load on Brunswick was released in 23 minutes, for a record concentration of 87 tons per minute.

In Leipzig, the RAF said, the greatest area of damage centered around the main railroad station in the Reich's third industrial city. It was said 50 identified factories had been hit, and 77 smaller works struck.

Leipzig, a city of 700,000, serves as a supply gateway to the Baltic front in Russia, and produces large quantities of machinery, chemicals, surgical instruments, textiles, and rubber goods.

Allied Raid on Austria

Stockholm (Monday), Jan. 17 (AP). Two big forces of Allied planes passed over western Hungary Sunday, indicating a raid on Austria, a dispatch from Budapest said early today. One force was reported over Hungary between 11:45 a. m. and 1 p. m. and the second between 1:45 and 2:10 p. m.

New Russian Drive Pierces Nazi Line

Russian success might cause Finland to drop out of the war. One Berlin spokesman was quoted as saying "we are convinced some of the bloodiest battles between great bodies of troops are about to be fought on the northern front."

Another German broadcast said the Russians had organized an army of one million men for a sweep westward to the Baltic states. The German high command itself admitted a Russian breakthrough "south of Leningrad"—an area not mentioned in Moscow announcements.

In lower White Russia the Russians crossed the Ippa River to take the west bank town of Novoselki, 17 miles north of Kalinkovichi in the Pripet marshes. This smash across a river that had not yet frozen resulted in the capture of several other localities, including Yakimovichi, 11 miles southwest of Novoselki.

The town of Klinsk, 7 miles west of Kalinkovichi, also was taken by Gen. Constantin K. Rokossovsky's army in White Russia. Other Russian units already had taken points 23 miles southwest of Kalinkovichi below the Pripet River. Pinsk, a major objective, lies about 100 miles beyond advance Red army units.

German broadcasts indicated the entire 1200-mile front from Leningrad to the Black Sea was ablaze. The Nazi high command announced Russian attacks northwest of Kirovograd in the Dnieper Bend, at the Nikopol bridgehead in the lower Dnieper, and northeast of Kerch in the eastern Crimea. Moscow did not mention any of those sectors, but said 6400 Germans were killed in yesterday's fighting alone.

Besides killing nearly 5000 Germans daily for the last three weeks on the first Ukraine front and destroying thousands of tanks and guns, Moscow said General Vatutin's Army also had destroyed 625 mortars, 2,173 machine-guns, 348 armored cars and transports, 4,686 trucks, two armored trains, 27 ammunition and food dumps, 17 military trains, 28 locomotives and 400 freight cars, 40 gasoline trucks and other material.

Listed as captured were 315 tanks, 902 guns, 321 mortars, more than 2,000 machine guns, 11,500 rifles, 157 armored cars, 3,514 trucks, 47 tractors, 480 motorcycles, 20 locomotives, more than 1,000 freight cars, three military trains carrying freight, 40 fuel tank cars, 230 dumps of ammunition, arms and food, 3,662 horses, 40 radio stations and other material.

127 Allied Planes Lost in Week; 168 Nazis Downed

London, Jan. 16 (INS).—An official summary disclosed today the Anglo-American air forces lost 127 planes over western Europe in last week's blitzing of the continent. They shot down 168 German interceptors.

American airmen accounted for 152 enemy planes, the RAF got 16 United States losses totaled 72, the British lost 55.

The over-all Allied plane loss for the week was 155 to the Germans' 236. Twenty-six Allied aircraft were missing on operations in the North African theater, where the enemy lost 66. The RAF lost a plane in the Middle East, another in southeast Asia. Two Nazi planes were shot down over Britain.

OWI Suppresses Negro War News, Minister Charges

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Jan. 16.—The Rev. A. Clayton Powell, Negro clergyman and former member of the City Council, charged today that "underlings" in the Office of War Information had deliberately suppressed information concerning Negroes in the armed forces.

Powell said the OWI had suppressed photographs of President Roosevelt and General Eisenhower reviewing Negro troops in Africa.

Hatchet Victim's Husband Held In Double Slaying

Spokane, Wash., Jan. 16 (INS).—Two men were held as material witnesses today in the gruesome hatchet killing in which two persons were hacked to death and two others left in critical condition in Spokane early Saturday.

T. P. Dillon, a sign painter, and Mrs. Jane Staples, 28, were slain and mutilated in Dillon's living quarters behind his shop. Both injured persons, Mrs. Dillon and F. S. Winett, remained unconscious today. No hope was held for Mrs. Dillon, but Winett, 31 and single, was expected to live.

Police held J. C. Staples, 56-year-old husband of the dead woman, and Arthur D. Brown, an employee at Dillon's sign shop. He told police he quit his job Friday afternoon, a few hours before the slaying, because his employer and the other three were holding a drinking party in the back room.

The bodies were found lying fully clothed on a blood-drenched bed in the Dillon living quarters.

Police are holding as clews a blood-stained hatchet evidently used by the killer as well as a pair of gloves found on the table in the blood-spattered bedroom.

Eisenhower Now in Britain For Big Push

London, Jan. 16 (AP).—After conferences in Washington, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, former commander of the triumphant Allied forces in North Africa and the Mediterranean, has arrived in Britain to direct the Allies' greatest effort of all—the western attack on Hitler's bristling European fortress.

The brief announcement was made by the "supreme headquarters of the Allied expeditionary force," newest and most ramified of United Nations strategy centers, and it said:

"It can now be announced that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has assumed the duties in the United Kingdom assigned him by the combined chiefs of staff.

"On his journey from the Mediterranean to the United Kingdom he had conferences with the President and the Prime Minister."

The United States War Department disclosed immediately that Eisenhower had spent "a few days" in Washington where he conferred with President Roosevelt and Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff.

Meantime it was revealed that Prime Minister Winston Churchill had conferred with Gen. Charles de Gaulle at Marrakech, French Morocco, last Wednesday and reached full agreement on the part the French will play in the Allied invasion of Europe.

Presumably Eisenhower conferred with Churchill prior to the meeting between the Prime Minister and De Gaulle.

Although obviously no inkling of the details of Eisenhower's discussions could be disclosed, those final sessions probably determined most of the questions that could be decided before the fateful hour when the armies come to grips across the Channel.

A new volume of invasion talk both here and on the continent coincided with the announcement of Eisenhower's arrival.

British warworkers adopted a new slogan, "Berlin this year." Its author is Sir Stafford Cripps, minister of aircraft production.

Nazi military commentators were theorizing that Marshal Josip Broz (Tito), the Yougoslav Partisan leader, was using his strong forces to keep a path clear for an Allied thrust from the Adriatic into central Bosnia.

Eisenhower said farewell to his Mediterranean troops January 2.—"Until we meet again in the heart of the enemy's continental stronghold" after predicting Allied victory over Germany in 1944.

Now he starts his great task of shaping the vast army assembling here—thousands upon thousands of them men from all States of the Union, of all branches of service, veterans and those who never have been under fire—for the ordeal ahead.

President Receives First-Hand Accounts

General Eisenhower, it appeared in Washington yesterday, first conferred with Prime Minister Churchill in North Africa, then proceeded to Washington for a meeting with the President and chief of staff before taking over his duties in England. The War Department said:

"General Eisenhower was here for a few days and while here conferred with the President and chief of staff."

The announcement suggested Mr. Roosevelt has received recent personal and detailed accounts from topflight leaders of America's armed forces on various world battlefronts.

Sub That Took Clark to Africa Rescued Giraud

London, Jan. 16 (AP).—The Admiralty disclosed tonight that the Seraph was the British submarine which secretly put Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark and others ashore on the Algerian coast and then reembarked them after a rendezvous with pro-Allied French leaders to pave the way for the North African landings in November, 1942.

The Seraph now is home for refitting after 13 months of Mediterranean operations during which she sank more than 7000 tons of enemy shipping, damaged 10,000 more, and carried out many other secret missions.

One of her exploits was the rescue of Gen. Henri Giraud from the French coast when he escaped to meet Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The submarine is commanded by Lieut. N. L. A. Jewell, who recently was awarded the Legion of Merit by President Roosevelt for the role he played in the Sicilian invasion.

Two Destroyers Launched at Kearny

Kearny, N. J., Jan. 16 (INS).—The first launchings of 1944 at the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co. today added two new destroyers—the Moale and the Ingraham—to the United States Navy.

The Ingraham was named for Capt. Duncan Nathaniel Ingraham, who in 1853 defied the Austrian Navy in Smyrna harbor to rescue an Hungarian-American from the Austrian man-o'-war, Huzzar.

Lieut. Edward Moale, jr., for whom the other ship is named, saw action during the Spanish-American war and died, in 1903, of an illness contracted while making land advances through the swamps of Luzon, in the Philippines.

Plus an additional $25 a week for 4 weeks for accidents requiring hospital confinement. Yet the total cost is only $12 a year. The purpose of this new Premier Limited Double Duty Policy is to bring sickness and accident protection within the reach of men and women who do not have large savings with which to meet sudden doctor or hospital bills, or lost income.

There is another new special clause that pays up to $25 cash for doctor bills, even for a minor accident such as a cut finger. Thus all accidents are provided for. In case of death by a common accident, the policy pays one thousand dollars cash to your family. Two thousand dollars if caused by a travel accident. In addition, it covers many common sicknesses such as pneumonia, cancer, appendicitis, etc., paying the weekly benefits whether confined to home or hospital.

The entire cost is only $12 a year, and that applies to men and women between the ages of 16 and 69. For people between the ages of 69 and 75 the cost is only $15 a year, benefits reduced to two-thirds after age 60. No medical examination is required.

Bazooka Helped Reds Stop Nazis

By the Associated Press

An intimation that the United States hastened to give Russia the secret of the bazooka gun to help the Red army battle Nazi tank attacks came yesterday from an Army ordnance expert.

Col. H. W. Miller of the Ordnance Reserve, writing in the military publication Army Ordnance, reported that "the newly developed American rocket-gun" was among the weapons the Soviets used in stopping the Nazi attempt to break through at Kursk and Orel with gigantic mass attacks of tanks in June, 1943.

The fact that Red forces were armed with the bazooka as of that date indicated that no great time elapsed between the first battle tests of the gun in the landings in North Africa in November, 1942, and delivery of plans or guns or both to the Russians.

Because construction of the bazooka gun itself is comparatively simple, (although the manufacture of the rocket projectile is more complicated) it is quite possible the Russians manufactured their own weapons from blueprints and a sample gun.

Miller said that the rocket-gun was used by the Russians along with their own artillery of various calibers, high-velocity antitank guns and highly effective and often used bottles of flaming gasoline to destroy 3000 German tanks during a two-week period on the Kursk and Orel lines.

Miller emphasized the close-combat character of the tank.

"If it cannot come to grips with the enemy infantry," he said, "it is a relatively useless device. And if the enemy is willing to use the heroic methods employed by the Russians, then the same slaughter (that prevailed at Kursk and Orel) may be expected on any battle front."

In this connection, he advised that under desperate circumstances "it must always be assumed that any group of men, particularly German troops against which we may find our own troops battling in France and Germany itself before long" will use the same heroic tactics.

These tactics, he said, are the tactice of lying in the fields or beside roads as though dead and permitting tanks to come abreast, then jumping up and throwing bottles of gasoline with detonators against the side of the tanks from distances of not more than 30 or 40 feet.

Nazis Say Patriots Are Battling to Keep Invasion Lane Open

London, Jan. 16 (AP).—Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) declared today his Partisan Army had brought German drives to a halt and seized the initiative in several sectors of the snow-crusted Bosnian Hills, and Nazis said the Yugoslavs were trying to hold open an Allied "invasion corridor" from the Adriatic.

Armed with apparently mounting supplies of Allied weapons parachuted from the skies, the patriots said they had occupied Glina, 40 miles south of Zagreb in the Crotian province of Kordun.

The communique added that Tito's men now were driving on Petrinja, 15 miles northeast of Glina, and that "successful operations" were proceeding in a 40-mile triangle formed by Glina, Zagreb and Ogulin. A small town near Ogulin, 22 miles inland from the sea approaches to Fiume, was occupied.

An increasing flow of supplies by air across the Adriatic to Tito's men was indicated by Axis broadcasts that sirens in Zagreb had been set off in the last week by planes ferrying over supplies to the patriots.

Neutral correspondents in Berlin said Nazi military commentators theorized that Tito was using strong forces to keep a path clear for an Allied thrust from the Adriatic into central Bosnia. These views were said to be based on documents seized after the Battle of Banja Luka, and from questioning of captured Yugoslav staff officers.

Tito's communique said his troops had thrown back German units trying to thrust along the Neretva River 50 miles southwest of Sarajevo, also near Krestvo, and had seized an enemy fortified position in the Livno-Duvno sector 50 miles inland from Split.

"Hard battles" also were reported in progress near Sinj, between the Livno-Duvno area and Split.

One German column near Vares, just north of Sarajevo, was defeated decisively, the bulletin added.

Wives' Morals Worry Troops, Cleric Says

Naples, Jan. 16 (AP).—United States troops overseas are "very bitter" over reports of deterioration in standards of sexual morality back home and are "terribly afraid they won't find the things they cherish," when they return, Rabbi Barnett Brickner, of the National Jewish Welfare Board, said today.

Rabbi Brickner, who is administrative chairman of the Committee on Army and Navy Religious activities and Rabbi at the Euclid Avenue Temple, Cleveland, Ohio, has virtually circled the globe in a tour of war theaters.

The men in America's war theaters "realize the war has given women more opportunities for extra-marital affairs," he said. "Some of them even know of cases in which the soldier has begun getting fewer and fewer letters from his wife and finally receives word she wants a divorce.

"While they are out here fighting and risking their lives that is a terrible tragedy. They are very bitter about it."

Sees Prejudices Waning

Rabbi Brickner said his travels had given him opportunity to ascertain the views and note the spiritual development of American soldiers and that he had reached the following conclusions:

1. There is an enormous recrudescence of the religious spirit among the men.

2. There has been a decrease in narrow religious denominationalism and racial prejudice.

3. It is probable that when the men return from overseas they will demand "more true religion and less dogma in their churches."

4. The present demand is for a higher type of entertainment and recreational facilities.

5. There is a necessity for more and better education regarding the ideals and objectives of this war.

Praises Chaplains

Rabbi Brickner praised highly the work of chaplains attached to the armed forces. He said in this theater he met one chaplain who hasn't slept in bed since the Salerno landing early in September and another who hadn't had his clothes off in the 29 days that his unit was in the line.

He asserted too that both Jews and Negroes with whom he had spoken told him they seldom met prejudices in the Army and "there's practically no anti-Semitism in the Army."

Morale is generally excellent, Rabbi Brickner said. He added he had encountered a belief among the men that there should be more rotation of divisions but "that has not interfered with their fighting spirit."

Vermont Democrats Indorse Fourth Term

Rutland, Vt., Jan. 16 (AP).—Chairman Charles P. McDevitt of the Vermont State Democratic Committee announced tonight that the committee had indorsed President Roosevelt for a fourth term, and sent a telegram asking the President to accept the nomination.

McDevitt said the indorsement was voted at a meeting here last night.

Huge New U. S. Bomber Named Superfortress

The United States' mightiest bomber, the B-29, has been given the official name of "Superfortress."

The announcement appeared yesterday in a statement by the joint aircraft committee, on which American and British military and naval services are represented, which reported that a long range policy for naming warplanes had been agreed on.

The committee said that names now in use for planes already in production would be retained, and listed them. In the list was the designation of the B-29.

Huge Flying Fortress

The "Superfortress," derives its name from the fact that it is a gigantic "Flying Fortress," the B-17 type. Boeing Aircraft is listed as the designer of both ships.

The committee has agreed that the names of new planes must assure uniformity, simplicity and convey a meaning. The policy will follow these lines:

Fighters: Names indicating speed, maneuverability, fighting characteristics or aggressiveness. (The last fighter plane announced, a deadly, two-engine night fighter, is designated "The Black Widow," after the killer spider.)

Other Designations

Bomber: Indicating size, weight, power, range or destructive characteristics.

Patrol types: Employing searfaring terms.

Cargo and personnel carrying transports: Range and load-carrying ability.

Trainers: Tuition terms, educational institutions or places of training other than the names of military or naval establishments.

Miscellaneous: Indicating the primary operational functions of the aircraft.

The list of names already approved carried no designation for the latest secret weapon, the jet-propulsion combat plane developed by the RAF and AAF.

Md. GOP Woman Leader Backs 'Equal Rights'

Mrs. Lula E. Powell, Republican National Committeewoman for Maryland, said yesterday she has sent letters to all the other national committeewomen of her party urging support for the so-called "Equal Rights Amendment" now before Congress.

She said in a statement the letters stressed the "tremendous importance in the coming election of Republican support of the amendment" which was designed to give women equal civil and various other rights. If approved by Congress, it would have to go to the States for approval or rejection.

Faced Heavy Fire

Cameraman Tells of Fight At Tarawa

Technical Sergt. Norman T. Hatch of Presidential Gardens, Alexandria, who emerged from the bloody battle for Tarawa with a pictorial record of the fighting, waded through 400 yards of bullet-ripped water to make his films.

HATCH

Now in Washington, Hatch declares that "it was the longest walk of my life."

"I wanted to dive under water every few yards," he said, "but I knew that my .35 millimeter equipment and the 5000 feet of film I carried would be ruined if I let the water hit them.

"My gear was so heavy that it took me more than 15 minutes to splash to the shore. Men were dropping all around, but I finally hit the sand and dove for cover."

Protected by a 3-foot seawall, Hatch said that he made pictures until sand, water and flying debris jammed his camera. A foxhole 20 feet behind the front lines afforded protection while he took the machine apart and cleaned it. When the intense heat began to melt the emulsion from his spare film, he buried it, digging it up and using it only when it was needed.

Later accompanied by Sergt. Obie Newcomb, a still cameraman from Crestwood, N. Y., Hatch accompanied a Marine flame-thrower unit in an assault on Japanese pillboxes. While photographing the attack from behind a log, two men killed by enemy snipers toppled over on the two cameramen, putting their gear out of commission. Hatch and Newcomb picked up rifles and joined in the assault. When a demolition squad finally destroyed the pillbox, the men repaired their cameras.

Fate of 5 U. S. Missionaries Still Mystery

La Paz, Bolivia, Jan. 16 (AP).—The fate of five American missionaries missing for two months in the Bolivian jungles remained a mystery today although a Franciscan father received information last night which, he said, indicated they had been killed by savages.

The priest received a telegram from a mission at Robore, near the Brazilian border, that blood-stained khaki clothing had been found at a jungle camp site among disordered and burned supplies apparently owned by the Americans. He said it appeared they had been killed with poisoned arrows.

Expedition Planned

(At Chicago, the secretary of the new tribes mission which the missing men represented said he had telephoned Robert Forbes Woodward, First Secretary to the U. S. embassy at La Paz, Sunday and had been informed the bodies of the missionaries had not been found. Woodward told the mission secretary that, although there was some evidence of attack, it was possible the missing men were living with the Indians and that an expedition would be sent to contact them.

(The men were identified at Chicago as Cecil A. and Robert Dye brothers; Eldon Hunter and David Bacon, all of Saginaw, Mich., and George Hosbach of West Branch, Mich.)

The Robore Mission was reported to have received its information fom a native who traveled 80 miles through the jungle from one of the wildest parts of Bolivia, inhabited mainly by roving tribes of Chiriguanos and Yanaiguas Indians.

The Chiriguanos are an old tribe which resisted both the Incas and the Spaniards and have remained averse to accepting Christianity.

One searching party was forced to return when its supplies were exhausted. Bolivian Defense Minister Jose Pedro announced Saturday that soldiers and planes would join in the search.

4-Fs Might Be Called First In Labor Draft

By the Associated Press

The Nation's 3,500,000 4-F's—men physically unfit for military service—may be the first to feel the weight of a Government labor draft if Congress enacts national service legislation.

Hearings on the compulsory manpower control issue will get underway before the Senate Military Committee tomorrow with an expected indorsement of the Austin-Wadsworth bill by Secretary of War Stimson and subsequent testimony by Lieut. Col. Francis V. Keesling, jr., of Selective Service.

Indications are that Selective Service will propose specific classifications under which single men rejected for Army service would be subject to first call in the transfer of individuals from one job to another.

Definit Classifications

As the bill now is drafted, it would be administered by Selective Service under a director of national service. Men from 18 through 64 years old and women from 18 through 49, except mothers of children under 18, expectant mothers, those in the armed services and State officials, would be subject to its terms.

The bill makes no mention of the order in which the labor draft would be applied, but Selective Service officials are prepared to suggest that definite classifications be written into the legislation. These probably would make single 4-F's under 30 liable first, dip next into the same class in the age limits up to 40 and call on family men and women last.

Stimson's projected indorsement was accepted in congressional circles as indicating that the Administration has chosen the pending bill, offered by Senator Austin (Republican) of Vermont and Representative Wadsworth (Democrat) of New York as the vehicle to carry out President Roosevelt's recommendation for enactment of national service legislation.

Austin Not Discouraged

Austin told a reporter he was not discouraged by the strong opposition which apparently has developed in Congress against passage of compulsory manpower legislation at this time. A similar outcry, he said, was raised against the Selective Service Act when it first was proposed.

The Vermont Senator dismissed as "a paper cut" the recent announcement o fthe War Manpower Commission that 600,000 fewer workers would be needed in war industries than previously had been estimated.

"Where unemployment is created by cutbacks in war production, this bill will be needed more than ever to effect the efficient transfer of workers from one job to another," he declared.

However, Senator Nye (Republican) of North Dakota said he thought the need for the legislation had passed because "we are over the manpower hump."

Without commenting directly on the measure, Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, told a press conference yesterday that she believed war time employment has reached its peak. The coming months, she said, may bring a decline in the total number of workers in the manufacturing industry.

'Slavery for Negroes'

Chicago, Jan. 16 (AP).—Edward G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council, asserted today that President Roosevelt's proposal for national labor conscription "can mean nothing but abject slavery again for all the Negro people."

"It is imperative for every single Negro worker and serviceman and woman to take pains to register and vote solidly to influence the election of a Republican President this year and a Republican Congress to defeat now and for all time the demand of President Roosevelt for a national conscription law," he said.

Brown addressed a meeting of Negroes, held under auspices of the council, which subsequently adopted a resolution calling on Congress to block any such legislation.

The council claims to represent 5,500,000 Negroes.

Boss' Shoes Put Plant on Safe Footing

Detroit, Jan. 16 (AP).—A vexing problem in women's footwear at a war plant appeared solved to everybody's peace of mind today after an affrighted management had prevailed upon two Government agencies for help.

Some of the 200 women handling oil-slippery bomb casings on an assembly line at Electromaster, Inc., did their work in bare feet. Others worked in stocking feet, bedroom slippers, wornout street shoes or what have you.

T. H. Mack, company personnel director, wrote an urgent letter to the Regional War Labor Board, pointing out that the women refused to spend stamps to buy "sensible factory shoes."

The board, acting on a company proposal to furnish its own safety shoes, ruled the plan could not be regarded as an indirect wage increase—a point in question—and approved it.

The Detroit Office of Price Administration helped out by permitting the company to put in a stock of safety shoes.

Roosevelt Lauds Accomplishments Of Refugee Agency

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—President Roosevelt said in a letter read today that the National Refugee Service was largely responsible "for the successful program of aid to new Americans" and added it was heartening that "our country is prepared to continue the well-conceived and effective program for aiding newcomers to fulfill their hopes of becoming good Americans."

The President's letter, read by Joseph P. Chamberlain, law professor of Columbia University and board chairman of the service, at the end of a two-day conference of the organization, complimented it on the completion of five years "of outstanding service."

Peacetime Draft Proposal Gains Favor

By the Associated Press

Compulsory military training as "peacetime insurance" against future wars won mounting congressional attention yesterday on the strength of an enthusiastic indorsement by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox.

Supporters of the legislation, privately expressing fears of a "Pacifist letdown" after the war, plan to seek a showdown on the issue within the next few months on the theory that its chances of passage will be best while the war is still on and selective service is in operation.

The measure has bipartisan support. One bill was introduced by Representative May (Democrat) Kentucky, chairman of the House Military Committee and another by Representative Wadsworth (Republican) of New York, former chairmen of the Senate Military Committee. Both would call for a year's military training for all able-bodied males between the ages of 18 and 21.

Hearings to Begin in Spring

May said that hearings on his measure would begin this spring. Wadsworth declared that consideration probably would have to lay over until Congress disposes—one way or the other—of proposed national service legislation and other war-born bills.

"Military training," said Wadsworth, "not only would provide a reservoir of manpower which could be drawn upon quickly in the event of another war emergency, but it would also serve the purpose of improving the Nation's health generally and develop the individual's self-reliance."

Under Wadsworth's plan, youths—preferably just out of high school—would be given a year's training and, if they demonstrated particular ability, would be encouraged to continue their schooling in military affairs to build up a skilled corps of reserve officers.

Chances of Passage Best Now

The bill's backers acknowledge, its chances of passage, are best now. One influential lawmaker, who declined use of his name, said that if the issue hangs over until the war's end, it would encounter stiff opposition and renewal of the cry: "I didn't raise my son to be a soldier."

Knox, in advocating the year's training in a speech at Cleveland Friday, declared that there is "no safety of peace in unpreparedness," and said that "all should shoulder a common responsibility of personal preparedness as a shield for the future security of our country."

OPA Acts to Increase Stocks of Work Gloves

Low-priced lines of work gloves should be back on the market soon, the Office of Price Administration said yesterday.

Announcing manufacturers' dollars-and-cents ceiling prices on about 100 styles of the gloves, the agency said the move is expected to encourage production of scarce low-cost types.

Hard Postwar Readjustments Forecast for Catholic Church

By the Associated Press

Difficult readjustments for the Catholic Church in the postwar period, with the possibility even of a strong anticlerical movement in its home seat in Italy, are forecast in a survey of papal foreign and political policy published yesterday by the Foreign Policy Association.

The study attributes to the Vatican a genuine concern with peace and justice in the recent years of international turmoil, but notes the Italian nationality of Popes, and says patriotism has colored relations with fascism in Rome. It asserts that papal recognition of German fascism as a worse enemy of the church than communism was belated.

Sherman S. Hayden, assistant to the president of the Foreign Policy Association, prepared the report for the privately financed international relations research organization. Available Catholic leaders here declined to discuss the report, on the ground that it is a matter of general papal policy, outside their province.

Anticlericalism Foreseen

"Critics (of the Papacy) both friendly and hostile," Hayden says, "have forecast a period of unprecedented anticlericalism in Italy, believing that the long association of the Vatican with Fascism will reap its harvest of hatred and even of persecution."

Events since the actual invasion of Italy, however, make that development seem less likely, he continues, "with growing evidence that the church is still regarded in some quarters as a refuge from fascism, and even that the Vatican has offered sanctuary to anti-Fascist refugees since the German occupation of Rome."

On the score of the church's general postwar position, the report says grave problems "are certain to confront the papacy."

Russia's New Position

"The predominance of Russia on the continent," Hayden says, "will impose the necessity of reckoning anew with atheistic communism, and the past policy of unswerving hostility may make this difficult . . .

"Neither the United States nor Britain is a Catholic country, but both may be described as well-disposed, and both have important Catholic minorities. In due time, however the increasing dependence of the Vatican, financial at least and possibly intellectual as well, on the western nations will undoubtedly create new problems for the church."

Further complications will arise, Hayden predicts, out of the increasing prominence of Asiatic nations which lack even the Christian tradition.

Papal Foreign Policy

Reviewing papal foreign policy, Hayden asserts that the Vatican "has shown an inclination toward Fascist governments in the past twenty years." He attributes that to "the hope, long tenaciously held and most reluctantly abandoned, that the Fascist states would defend civilization against communism."

Hayden argues that a democrat can be that and a good Catholic at the same time, but that the authoritarian state's assumption of supremacy over every other consideration makes fascism wholly incompatible with the Catholic dependence on a power outside man's organizations.

As for the atheistic tenets of communism, the report says that the present Pope, Pius XII, while adamant in opposition, "seems to have learned what his predecessors never did, that German fascism is the more serious enemy of the church.

The day was ideal with temperatures ranging from 28 degrees at 8 a. m. to a high of 36 degrees at 2:55 p. m. The Weather Bureau predicted that the thermometer would descend to 24 degrees early today and forecast "fair and moderately cold weather" the remainder of the day.

Speakers will include Land, who is chairman of the commission and administrator of War Shipping Administration; Capt. Edward Macauley, deputy administrator, War Shipping Administraton; Daniel W. Bell, Undersecretary of Treasury; Telfair Knight, assistant deputy administrator for Training Organization, and Lieut. Comdr. Charles J. Zimmerman, United States Navy, recently of the Pacific Fleet. The Navy band will play.

John A. Reilly, District War Finance chairman, at the Board of Trade rally, will present Admiral Gatch, who is judge advocate of the Navy, with the District Seal, to be inscribed on a group of carrier-based planes for which funds were raised during the Third War Loan.

Ted R. Gamble, national director of War Finance for the Treasury, said that announcements of sales during the campaign will be based on cash sales of the various type bonds available.

Chairman Reilly, on the eve of the campaign, said:

"Washington and the Washington Board of Trade are particularly honored in having this meeting tonight designated as the opening gun of the Fourth War Loan drive for the Nation. This proves again a statement that has been made many times before that the eyes of the country are upon the Nation's Capital and we are expected to set the pace for the entire country in this campaign.

"The sum of 95 million, while large, is a proportionate share of the total goal that must be achieved. I appeal to every resident to rally behind this effort and to set an example for every citizen of the United States to follow. On the eve of the campaign I feel confident that the residents of the District will not shirk what is not only their responsibility but their privilege."

Wickard Sees Big Postwar Food Output

A postwar expansion of food production even beyond the current peak was put forth by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard yesterday as a major peacetime goal for American farmers.

Stating that citizens are beginning to ask questions about the future, the Cabinet member said it was time for "all of us to clarify our thinking, agree upon what we want, and set about doing the job."

His program, drafted with the aid of department interbureau and regional committees, was offered, he said, as a basis for discussion concerning the national agricultural policy after the war.

Details of Program

The proposed agenda, announced in a pamphlet prepared for public distribution, calls for:

1. A nutritionally adequate diet and ample fiber supplies for all, requiring "substantially" more food than the Nation has ever produced before.

2. Parity income for farmers based on a new and improved parity formula for farm prices.

3. More equitable public services and facilities—such as schools, hospitals, roads, electricity, medical services, sanitation facilities, recreational and vocational training opportunities—for rural areas.

4. A more efficient farm product marketing system at a lower cost.

Family Size Farms

5. National policies which would encourage family-size farms.

6. Better land-tenure conditions and the diffusion of landed property among more owner-operators.

7. Reclamation and settlement of 40 million acres of land through drainage, irrigation and clearing.

8. Greater employment of present part-time farmers now living on subsistence tracts near urban areas.

9. Greater conservation of soil and forestry resources.

10. Maintenance of a high level of industrial activity as "an indispensable means" of providing a market for abundant farm production.

11. A "freer" international trade policy involving a decrease in domestic production of agricultural commoditites that cannot meet world competition without tariffs or subsidies.

Veteran Pay Measure Heads Toward Bonus as House Acts

of each monthly payment being contingent on the earnings of the individual after his return to civilian life.

Leaders of some veterans' groups, including the Veterans of Foreign Wars, expressed fear Congress might make the discharge payments so high as to jeopardize other compensation claims of returning veterans. There appeared to be little doubt, from testimony already given the military committee, that the veterans' organizations will demand bonus, or adjusted pay, legislation after the war.

An even livelier controversy is expected over soldier-vote legislation, booked to follow the discharge pay bill to the House floor. The fight on this issue is whether the individual States or the Federal Government shall supervise the voting of an estimated 10,000,000 service men and women.

The Senate has passed a bill leaving the matter up to the States. The House Elections Committee, after a sharp fight, reported out a similar measure. Opponents claim millions of soldiersO would not get a chance to vote this year under State procedure because many States cannot or will not set up the machinery to expedite such balloting between now and November. The Army and Navy have informed Congress the job of distributing ballots for 48 States under State election control would be almost impossible.

Some other legislators contend the most practical method of getting ballots to soldiers in time to be marked, returned and counted is to let the Federal Government handle the job.

Representative Rankin (Democrat) of Mississippi predicted a "speedy and complete" victory by supporters of the amended Senate bill which would leave the election machinery up to the States.

"This is the only way," he said, "in which provision can be made for these men and women in our armed forces to vote in the coming election without violating the Constitution, usurping the rights of the States and running the risk of throwing the election into confusion if not chaos."

In another statement yesterday, Representative Vursell (Republican) of Illinois declared that the revised Senate measure could be approved by Congress within 10 days "if the Administration will stop its blocking and delaying tactics . . ."

All Factions Rally to Cause of Simplified Tax Laws

By Francis M. LeMay
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Administration and Congress, oldtime quarrelers over the size and methods of revenue legislation, found one area of agreement yesterday, jointly calling for a general overhauling of tax laws, to make them really simple.

Republicans and Democrats alike responded to the public clamor against the intricacy of the income tax returns that must be filed on or before March 15 by about 50 million persons.

Representative Robertson (Democrat), member of the tax-drafting House Ways and Means Committee, proposed yesterday a definite program for simplification, which he said would collect currently the total tax of approximately 30 million persons and relieve that number of having to file any returns at all after this year.

Proposes Merging

The Virginian's program would:

1. Merge the victory tax, the normal tax and the surtax into one minimum rate to be collected fully at the source from wages and salaries through the medium of withholding by the employer.

2. Reduce the amount of that rate, and necessarily the amount to be withheld, by computing the minimum rate against a new taxable income to be arrived at by deducting from gross income those items of expense incurred in earning the income, plus family status exemptions, and nothing more.

Demands for simplification all but overshadowed Senate debate on the second wartime tax law, expected to provide only one-fifth the $10,500,000,000 additional revenue requested by the Treasury.

The Senate met in an unusual Saturday session to speed passage af the House-approved tax bill but adjournment Saturday night found it still to act on such thorny issues as proposed amendment of the renegotiation law which was set up to recover excess profits on war contracts, the question of whether to require labor unions to file financial returns, and proposed increases in taxes on admissions and cosmetics.

Made No. 1 Job

In a siwft, bipartisan development toward overhauling the tax laws, Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Caronia has docketed "simplification" as the number one job for the Ways and Means Committee in 1944. Representative Carlson (Republican) of Kansas led off with a simplification proposal, a conference of House Republicans called for an overhauling, and Randolph Paul, Treasury Department general counsel, said citizen Joe Doakes wants tax laws so simple that they "read like a pill advertisement."

The various statements, by members of Congress and by the Treasury representative, were accepted on Capitol Hill as promising a unity of purpose between the Administration and Congress in a concerted drive to take higher mathematics out of tax computations.

However, there is no prospect that a simplification law can be enacted in time to affect the returns due March 15.

Music in Industry

American manufacturers have learned that music, properly used in their plants, has substantially increased production, lessened fatigue, reduced rejections and improved morale.

American workers have expressed themselves as overwhelmingly in favor of "music while they work." It has made their jobs less monotonous and actually easier to accomplish.

ASCAP has had a natural interest in this development . . . both in Great Britain and in America. Our studies of the application of music to industry have been orderly and scientific, and have produced much valuable information which is available, without cost, to any manufacturer.

He's a mighty important person!

Your grocer, your butcher, your delicatessen man—all are doing work as necessary and as complex as almost any on the home front. They're keeping people well fed and healthy ... and working under the most severe restrictions they have ever faced — inadequate help, supply shortages, point rationing, ceiling prices and other problems.

Your co-operation helps your food merchants meet these wartime problems — and their National Cash Registers help, too—giving you fast service—a printed receipt of your purchases—and easing the stores' manpower difficulties. Fewer salespeople are needed ... merchants have accurate daily facts and figures without too much detail work ... bookkeeping is simplified and records provided for completing the many Government reports. National systems aid the war economy by saving time on both sides of the counter.

Serving the Nation by Saving Time. This is one of many mechanized systems built by National to speed record keeping, protect money and save vital man-hours — for business, industry, Government and the public.

While your $100 nestled in the bank

THE TIME: November, 1943.

THE PLACE: Betio, just one of twenty-five outcroppings that comprise Tarawa atoll of the Gilbert Islands.

SCENE I: Early morning of November 19th.

In the most concentrated naval gunfire in history, 800 tons of bombs are dropped by American carrier planes and 2000 tons of shells are hurled by battleships, cruisers, and destroyers.

But all of that is not enough.

SCENE II: The next day.

The table reef prevents the Marines from landing in their Higgins boats and many have to debark 800 yards from the beach and wade in against heavy fire.

Squads of them are blown back into the water in bloody, unidentifiable masses. Many more are hung in death on the barbed-wire barricades in the shallow waters that lap over the treacherous reef.

Now come the Jap pillboxes—some 500 of them—made of coconut logs or concrete or steel. So ingeniously staged are these pillboxes that when a forward one is destroyed, the Marines moving into the cleared area are mowed down by fire from two inner pillboxes.

And finally, the inevitable snipers in the palm trees—unseen, unpredictable, accurate.

SCENE III: Evening of the third day.

Betio has been taken by the United Nations!

But that little strip of white coral, less than one square mile in area, cost us the fiercest, bloodiest, most ruthless battle in all American history. 1092 Marines paid with their lives. And the best part of 2680 will never again be whole, free-moving men.

Officers who know warn us that Betio was only the beginning of the real war in the Pacific.

Is that $100 of yours still nestling? It's needed—now. It's needed to help put over the Fourth War Loan, to keep backing the attack! At least $100 extra, over and above your regular bond-buying. Better $200, $300, $500. Today!

Picture Industry Calls Its Signals

Plans Intact for Fourth War Loan; Notes and Gossip of the Theater

ADOPTING AS ITS SLOGAN and its goal, "A Bond For Every Seat In Every Theater"—and that mounts up to 11½ million seats—the motion picture industry has completed its plans for a gigantic war bond sales drive in conjunction with the Fourth War Loan.

INGRID BERGMAN

The campaign will be launched tomorrow and close February 15.

The Washington theaters are reported ready with the most ambitious program they have ever undertaken. After numerous meetings between the Motion Picture Theater Owners of the District and the War Activities Committee, Chairman Carter T. Barron of the drive committee, reports that, for the first time, every theater in Washington has pledged itself to do its part.

Bond booths, lobby displays and screen trailers will impress upon the picturegoer that war bonds are available day and night, Sundays and holidays, at any theater he may attend.

Free Movie Day will be observed in every theater in the Capital on Monday, February 14. Anyone buying a bond on that day will be accorded free admission to the theater where the bond is purchased.

Three bond premieres will be held, attractions and dates to be announced. One will be at RKO-Keith's Theater, one at the Warner Brothers' Earle and one at Loew's Capitol.

Simultaneously with the opening of the drive, a Caravan of War Heroes and motion picture stars will begin a tour of 200 cities. The identities of those who will visit Washington will be disclosed in a few days.

These are only the highlights of as pretentious and carefully planned a campaign as the combined ingenuity and resourcefulness of the Capital's showmen can devise.

The indivdual intiative of theater men in this city will be brought into play in the "Honored Hundred" contest. The leading showmen who sell the most bonds in ratio to the respective setting capacities of their houses will receive national, industry recognition by being designated to blueprint the campaign for the Fifth War Loan. In Washington, President A. Julian Brylawski of the MPTO announces that his organization has appropriated $600 for war bond prizes for nine theater men who sell the most bonds in proportion to the sizes of their theaters. The nine local section leaders are Abe Tolkins, Fred Kogod, Frank Storty, Lloyd Wineland, Walter Cersley, Sidney Hoffman, Sidney Lust, Harry Bachman, and H. Graham Barbee.

It Is Narrowing Down

The projection-room bookmakers in Hollywood, according to private report, are laying odds that this year's Academy Award for the best feminine screen performance will lie among Ginger Rogers, Greer Garson, Ingrid Bergman and Jennifer Jones. Miss Rogers' claim is said to rest upon "Tender Comrade," described as by far her best picture; Miss Garson's on her portrayal of the title role in "Madame Curie," now at the Palace; Miss Bergman's on "For Whom the Bell Tolls" and Miss Jones' on "The Song of Bernadette."

RKO-Radio must be reasonably sure it has something in "Tender Comrade," or they would not have pursued the course they did. The picture was only completed and in the cans on December 1, for ostensible release next month. To be eligible for an Academy Award, a picture must be presented in Hollywood for a seven-day play date not later than December 31. So, contrary to every expectation, "Tender Comrade" was plopped into TWO Los Angeles theaters on the night of December 29. The purpose is obvious.

As everybody knows, Ginger Rogers and Greer Garson each already has an "Oscar" on her mantle, the one for "Kitty Foyle," the other for "Mrs. Miniver."

So all right, get on with the voting!

The avalanche of complaints reaching this desk by wire, letter, phone call and word of mouth against the fiasco of the box-office seat sale or the "command performance" of "The Voice of the Turtle" dictates that in simple justice the public be informed that it is directing its venom at the wrong victim.

The "command performance" is no more a part of the regular routine of "show business" than the March of Dimes is of Secretary Morgenthau's tax plan. It is exclusively an enterprise of the committee in charge of the President's Birthday Celebrations. It is not in any sense under the jurisdiction or control of the National Theater, toward which all of the complaints coming to me have been aimed. That is the wrong target.

How it happened that less than 100 in a boxoffice queue two blocks long were able to reach the window before the tickets on sale were exhausted, I do not know. What I do know is that a tremendous number of eager, prospective patrons of the event feel a deep sense of disappointment and indignation over what they are pleased to deem a misleading representation. I have no answer for that, beyond the fact that the National Theater had nothing to do with it. "The Voice of the Turtle" will merely be presented there. Let's be fair about it.

From the U. S. Army Motion Picture Service: From a box-office standpoint, the following are the 10 most popular pictures shown in Army theaters during the calendar year 1943. In the order named, "Guadalcanal Diary," "Crash Dive," "Destination Tokyo," "Air Force," "Sahara," "Arabian Nights," "Desperadoes," "Happy Go Lucky," "This Is the Army" and "Hello, Frisco, Hello." Worth noting that the top half of the list are all "war pictures." What's with that "escapist" obsession?

Omnibus for Columbia

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 16.—Columbia's about to make a picture titled "Calling All Stars," which will give all their young players a chance to show what they can do. Irving Berlin will produce the story, written by Monte Brice. The only one so far set in the cast is Lynn Merrick, who, I hear, does a nice job in "Nine Girls." The picture's supposed to go into production in the next two or three weeks, so that casting will go right ahead. In addition to contract players they'll also use specialty acts from cafes and radio shows all over the country . . . Only criticism the reviewers gave "Tender Comrade" when it opened was for the last scene, in which Ginger Rogers is shown receiving the word that her husband has been killed. Although the picture was already running here with that ending, the studio went to work and shot a new one, which studio experts believe adds that desired touch of perfection. The ending will be substituted in the film any minute, which, incidentally, ought to be good for a lot of repeat business from customers who saw it during the first few days.

Oversold, Maybe?

Diana Lewis and Ruth Terry have been pals for a long time. Diana didn't think Ruth was getting the breaks. She went out and started selling Ruth, so much so that Ruth was tested for the part opposite Frank Sinatra. While that was being made Ruth boasted so much about Diana that next day Diana was tested for the same part. But now it looks as though Janis Carter will get it! . . . Lou Smith is in town after his tussle with pneumonia at Tucson, Ariz. . . . Phil Regan can make his own plans now that his Twentieth Century contract is ended. They did absolutely nothing for him . . . Eddie Mannix, friend of the motion picture relief fund home, has given the home another bungalow . . . Critics here were upset when department store people got a look at "Lady in the Dark" before they did.

This and That

The war garden built of artifical vegetables for "Janie" cost more than $1000. The cabbages cost $5 a head, but they'll be just as good 10 years from now, their maker says . . . The Warner brothers got food and drink when they fed the high ranking officers and the brass hats of the town dinner at their studio Friday night. Gosh! You've got to have a lot of points to feed that many . . . Elyse Knox got a present of a Great Dane from John Payne to keep the wolves away. She's named the dog Hamlet. Elyse had word from Tommy Harmon asking her to be in Ann Arbor, Mich., when he arrives there, but he didn't say when . . . June Vincent is mighty happy that her fiance's eyesight is okay again and he'll be able to fly.

Well, I Swan!

When Ruth Selwyn arrived with John Warburton, full of good cheer, to visit her former husband, Edgar Selwyn, he couldn't linger, but gave her a bottle of champagne and asked why she didn't go visit her brother, Fred Wilcox, who was out in a bungalow in back. With her arms full of packages, she went to see Fred, but he was busy. She turned around to leave and walked right into the swimming pool, bundles, and all. Johnny grabbed for her and came up with her fur coat. Finally they fished her out. She said, "Happy New Year, everybody!" and wandered on. Next morning she called up Edgar to ask if her bundles were still in the pool. They were!

Step Right Up

John Wengraf, who's now working in "Till We Meet Again," is still trying to find out who left that spaniel puppy in a basket on his doorstep Christmas morning. He's delighted with the gift, and wants to say thank you to the right party . . . Jon Hall gave his Great Dane to Gary Cooper . . . Roy William Neill, director and producer of the new "Sherlock Holmes in Canada," says there'll be only one girl in the cast.

Taking Broadway's Pulse Beat

New York, Jan. 16.—Aline Bernstein, the noted designer, was preparing some costumes for a Theater Guild production. She needed some details about the uniforms worn by British sailors in 1860, and asked her secretary to get them. "I'll find out, Mrs. Bernstein," the secretary assured her. Mrs. Bernstein then left for her country home in Westchester. . . . Her secretary phoned Brooks Costume Co. for the information. "Nobody here knows, but we'll find out," they assured her. The Brooks employe called the Museum of Costume Art. . . . "We don't know it, offhand," the museum's employe reported, "but we'll soon find out." The employe telephoned Aline Bernstein, who is a trustee of the museum, and said, "Someone wants to know about the uniforms British sailors wore in 1860. Do you know?" . . . By this time the designer had found the information in a book at her country home. Mrs. Bernstein gave the information to the museum employe, who relayed it to the Brooks employe, who gave it to Mrs. Bernstein's secretary, who then gave it to Mrs. Bernstein.

Al Smith is treasuring a warm birthday message he received from the President a few days ago. . . . Charles "Lucky" Luciano, once public enemy No. 1, who was sent to Dannemora, now is at Comstock, the medium security place for good, trustworthy prisoners. . . . Juliette Durand-Texte, who is giving a Town Hall recital on January 21, is the wife of Camille Chautemps, the former Premier of France. Chautemps was sent to America by Petain, after the fall of France, with an expense account of $1000 a week from the Vichy Embassy. After two months the payments were stopped. His wife, an able pianist, is giving recitals as a livelihood.

After the final performance of "Outrageous Fortune," Gloria Swanson visited Ouspenskaya backstage, and urged her to remain on Broadway. The venerable Ouspenskaya argued in favor of Hollywood. Swanson, the screen actress, reminded her: "There's no theater in Hollywood." Ouspenskaya, the stage actress, replied: "There's no Hollywood in the theater." After 15 minutes of this, Ouspenskaya said goodby, and made her postponed trip to the hospital—postponed because of the theater's "show must go on" tradition . . . Al "Pistol Packin' Mama" Dexter, who couldn't get 10 cents credit a short time ago, just bouguht his wife a $5000 mink coat . . . Vladimir Horowitz, who played the first performance of Prokofieff's seventh Sonata, at the Soviet Consulate, memorized the difficult piece in two weeks.

Lucky Cochrane, the young Boston socialite whose name has been linked with Victor Mature's, will join the Ziegfeld Follies showgirl-line . . . January 15 was an unusual day in the life of Jimmy Savo as well as in the mazagine business. Savo, now at Cafe Society Uptown, saw his new literary career take strange strides. For on the 15th Savo had articles appearing in two publications—Vogue and the Hobo News.

Morris L. Ernst, the attorney, recently returned from England where, among other things, he fulfilled a Government mission. Ernst returned via Scotland. When his plane arrived in Washington he telephoned the priority division about a plane-seat to New York. "Have you a priority?" the official asked him "No," said Ernst. "But I want to get to New York quickly." . . . "What's the reason for the urgency? the official asked. "I've been away from home a long time and I want to see my wife," said Ernst . . . "That's the first time we've ever received such an honest answer," the official replied. "Priority granted."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

AT A SAFE DISTANCE from Teheran, the full story can now be told of the measures taken to protect the President from the plot against his life.

The message from Stalin, warning Roosevelt that Nazi paratroopers had come down in Iran, reached the American Embassy on the day of the President's arrival. Stalin himself had arrived the night before and learned that 38 paratroopers had landed in the countryside, that 26 of them had been rounded up, but that 12 were still at large.

Since the Soviet and British Embassies were adjacent in one part of town and the American Embassy more than a mile distant, it would be safer for all three leaders if they could be brought together and guarded by the same force. But the problem was how to get the President safely to the Soviet Embassy?

The problem was solved by a finesse of which the United States Secret Service may now be proud. The main route between the American and Soviet Embassies was guarded constantly by Persian police. Churchill had covered this route when he arrived, driving from the airport to the British Embassy. Secret Service men looked at the crowd of spectators lined up along the way and shook their heads. There were between 30,000 and 40,000 people—a motley mixture of races—in which a desperado might easily mingle without being noticed.

So Secret Service ordered out United States troops to supplement the Persian police—and then took another route entirely. When the Yank uniforms appeared, the whole town was sure the President would come that way. Thus, every other part of the town was deserted.

President Virtual Prisoner

SECRET SERVICE bustled the President into a car, and drove him down the side streets of the town, unobserved by anyone. They had tried to get an armored car, but there was no such equipment to be had in Iran. However, this journey, and the return journey four days later, were safely executed.

At the Soviet Embassy, during the four days of conferences, the President was a prisoner in his quarters. He lived in the same building where the conferences were held and did not venture outdoors at any time.

Another Secret Service worry was about the water supply. Teheran has no general sewage system or piped water supply. The water runs down from the mountains in open aqueducts, which many use as semisewer. Fortunately, the British and Russian Embassies were equipped with their own special pipe lines. But even this water was carefully tested before the big shots arrived.

Only members of the American party who got sick were some of the Secret Service detail who experimented too freely with dishes of camel's meat.

Note—This assignment was by far the most difficult ever undertaken by Secret Service in guarding the person of any President. Chief of the detail was Michael F. Reilly.

Oil Men on Subsidies

ECONOMIC STABILIZER Judge Vinson recently held a revealing session with a group of Midwestern oil men which got right down to the heart of the subsidy question.

The oil men were headed by Reid Brazell of Leonard Refinery, Inc., Alma, Mich.; Gerand Day of Western Petroleum Refiners Association, Tulsa, Okla.; Barney Majewski of Deep Rock Oil Co., Chicago, and several others. They told how Midwest oil had been taken away from Illinois, Nebraska, Ohio, Kentucky and other Midwestern States in order to give more oil to the East. And they asked that the Midwest be allotted more crude oil from west Texas.

West Texas is easily able to supply more crude oil to Midwest refineries, and these refineries want about 75,000 barrels more per day. Furthermore, Judge Vinson feels that they need it. The visiting oil men told how oil reserves were being used up to such an extent that Midwest farmers would not have enough gasoline to run their tractors for spring plowing.

However, there was one big hitch. The cost of transporting crude oil from west Texas by rail (pipe lines are crowded) would run about 90 cents a barrel above normal. So the Midwest refiners wanted the Government to pay the extra charge.

"What we want is a compensatory payment of a war-induced cost," they explained.

"What?" asked Judge Vinson, the champion of subsidies. "A compensatory payment of a war-induced cost? Well, will you explain to me the difference between that and a subsidy?"

The oil refiners grinned, argued a little, but finally admitted that there was no difference.

"In other words," said Vinson, "a subsidy by any other name would smell as sweet. And you are against subsidies unless it's a good subsidy."

Note.—The Midwest refiners probably will get their transportation subsidy, especially as oil companies shipping to the East Coast by rail instead of tanker get a subsidy from the Government of around a million dollars a day.

25-Year-Old Film Gets Sound Track

Hollywood.—A quarter century after it was made, the Alla Nazimova film "Salome" has been given a musical sound track in an experiment conducted by John Hays Hammond, famous inventor. The early masterpiece of the great Russian actress, who has returned to the screen to play Paul Henreid's mother in Warners' "In Our Time," proved unexpectedly easy to score, it was revealed. Like many silent pictures, it was enacted to music, this one to the strains of Richard Strauss' opera "Salome," and the same music was used in scoring.

Trans-Lux Thrills

There are heartening and thrilling scenes in the news section of the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater. They picture futile Jap air attacks on Bougainville and at Arawe, during which the cameras caught more than one of the Nip bmobers plunging into eternity. Among a multiplicity of other clips, Admiral Halsey is heard in a few assurances of victory and the public is given important tips as to the form and uses of the forthcoming ration tokens.

The March of Time's "Naval Log of Victory," one of its most interesting issues, tops the short subjects, with "Wings in Record Time" taking second place. The latter is an Enblish-made film, depicting the construction of a complete bomber in the brief span of 24 hours. Sports are represented by Bill Stern's "Tenpin Aces," which will bowl you over with its expert bowling, and the humor for the week is supplied by the cartoon comedy, "Polly Wants a Doctor."

Twin Bill at Pix

A gangster film and a horror number comprise the Pix double bill this week, with Tom Neal in "The Racket Man" and Bela Lugosi in "Return of the Vampire."

"The Racket Man" provides shooting, love interest, tears and a moral in a new version of the old tale about the two Irish kids who grow up together in a tenement, one to become a cop, the other a gangster. The solution in this one is that the gangster goes straight, undertaking to track down his old associates for the FBI.

Tom Neal is the gangster, Hugh Beamont is the cop, and Jeanne Bates is the girl they both love.

Michael Duane costars with Lugosi in the "Vampire" film.

Mail Zone System Proves Success, Is Made Permanent

By Karl R. Bauman
Associated Press Staff Writer

The zone mail system, inaugurated last June in more than 120 major cities, already has proved so successful in preventing jams and speeding deliveries that the Postoffice Department has decided to make it permanent.

"It's not something that's with us just for the duration, but it's here to stay," Forest Hall, special assistant to Postmaster General Walker, said yesterday.

Hall said the system, plus the mail-early campaign, helped substantially in handling the 1943 Christmas mail.

"Despite the tremendous volume and much inexperienced personnel, none of the oldtimers in the department can remember a better year," Hall reported. "Jams developed in a few railway centers, but everything else went well."

The secret of the system's success is that it enables an inexperienced clerk to handle mail with the best of the veterans.

The zone system is being used in all cities having a substantial number of branch offices. In the handling of the mail, each branch is the same as a city in itself. All mail clears through the central postoffice, then is sorted for the branches.

If a letter comes in "Washington 6," instead of merely Washington, a first-day clerk can immediately route it to substation 6 without having any idea where it is located. If, however, the 6 is missing, the clerk must know from the address which substation is supposed to get it.

"We expect to save some money, but the primary objective is to improve the postal service," Hall explains. "There is no doubt that zoned mail can be handled faster."

Another zone experiment is being made in a few one-postoffice cities. Instead of substations, the zone number represents the city route. Hall says he is not too hopeful about this, since city routes change so frequently.

Eighty per cent of the mail coming from soldiers overseas contains the zone number, the highest percentage for any class of mail.

"The only way I can explain it," Hall says, "is that soldiers, themselves anxious for mail, are anxious to get mail home as fast as possible."

Jewel Thief Found Slain In Boston Suburb

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 16 (INS).—Greater Boston's first ride-slaying in several years came today with the discovery of the body of Arthur Duffy, 40, notorious jewel thief, in Blanchard rd., Cambridge.

Duffy had recently flown from Miami, where he was awaiting trial for the theft of a tray of diamonds. He also was wanted for a $10,000 jewel robbery in Cincinnati.

Martin Test Pilot Gets Sperry Award

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—William Benjamin Bergen, chief flight test pilot of the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft Co. of Baltimore, was named recipient of the Lawrence Sperry Award for 1943 by the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences today.

The award was made for Bergen's work on the "theoretical and experimental studies of dynamic loads on airplanes."

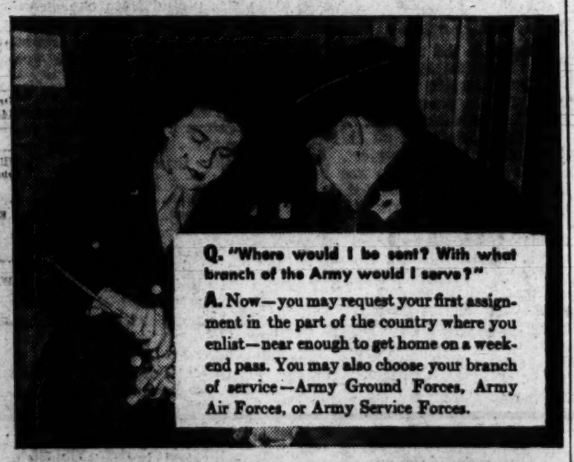
Is this what you've wondered about the WAC?

Q. "What kind of job would I do?"

A. Any one of 239 types of Army jobs. All kinds of special skills are needed—clerical workers, medical technicians, mechanics, teachers. Women without experience can get expert Army training—in skills for which they have natural aptitude.



Q. "Where would I be sent? With what branch of the Army would I serve?"

A. Now—you may request your first assignment in the part of the country where you enlist—near enough to get home on a weekend pass. You may also choose your branch of service—Army Ground Forces, Army Air Forces, or Army Service Forces.

Q. "Aren't there enough Wacs without me?"

A. No! General Marshall says: "Many thousands more Wacs are needed." Unless more women join at once, the War Department cannot meet the demands which come in daily from Army Ground Forces, Army Service Forces, and Army Air Forces.

What else do you wonder?

YOUR PERSONAL POST WAR WORLD
The John Hammacks live at 7126 Keller Street, Houston, Texas.
Says John Hammack, "It's just plain common sense that we need to hold down prices right now.
"These extra war dollars we are making won't do us a bit of good—if prices go way up. And we'll have trouble after the war.
"So you can count on the Hammack family to do every one of the things the seven-point plan calls for."

Here's what you can do NOW to head off Runaway Prices

IT'S EASY TO SAY, "It isn't up to me to do anything about high prices. That's Uncle Sam's job. Count me out."

But that's a way of kidding ourselves. Or of trying to pass the buck.

Of course, there are things that the Government alone can and must do to control prices. But there are things that only we can do—we, the people. In fact, we must do our part, if the country's fight is going to be successful.

7 Things we can do

Our Government has drawn up a clear-cut seven-point program. (See the box at the right.) It shows what we can do—what all of us should do—to make the war against runaway prices really work. It shows where our part fits in with the Government's.

Just how the program does the job is clear if we think of the reasons for runaway prices.

We see how each of those seven points does one of two things. Some ask us to put our extra money where we won't be tempted to spend it on scarce goods. Others ask us to be good sports and live up to ration rules and price ceilings.

That's a program that will help us as individuals—and help the nation, too. It's a fine program to get started on today—if you haven't already—and to keep following right along.

Here's what causes Runaway Prices...

In war, most of our factories are working full time making weapons. And a whole lot fewer peacetime goods are being made.

At the same time, many of us are being paid more in wages and salaries than ever before.

If we disregard price ceilings and try to use this extra money to buy these few goods—bingo! prices start going up! It's just the way prices go up at an auction.

But if we all follow our Government's seven-point program, it's a sure bet that we'll keep prices under control.

* * *

68,000,000 Americans, with the help of their life insurance agents are already doing one of these seven things. They have also found the peace of mind, the family protection, the feeling of independence that owning life insurance brings.

It is in the interest of these 68,000,000 people—as well as the nation as a whole—that the Life Insurance Companies of America have joined together to bring you this wartime message to help prevent runaway prices. Address inquiries to 60 East 42nd St., New York 17, New York.

JOHN HAMMACK has an important war job as foreman in a shipyard. He does a lot of thinking about his future security, as his budget shows. Out of his family income of $5,260 he sets aside $2,395 for War Bonds, life insurance, savings and debt payments.

Here are the 7 Things our Government suggests that every family can do now and continue to do

1. Buy and hold War Bonds.
2. Pay willingly our own share of the taxes—including increased taxes—that our country needs.
3. Provide for our security by adequate life insurance and savings.
4. Reduce our debts as much as possible.
5. Buy only what we need and make what we have last longer.
6. Follow the ration rules and price ceilings.
7. Cooperate with our Government's wage stabilization program.

Good Work On Health

The Post congratulates the District Health Department on the excellent health record of this community in wartime. In spite of overcrowding and the danger of epidemic, 1942 was the city's healthiest year up to that time. Frankly we thought that the slash in the death rate that year was too great to be maintained. But yesterday Health Officer George C. Ruhland announced that the record for 1943 was slightly better than that of the preceding year. The city's death rate of 10.7 per thousand population is now close to the national average for the first time in many years.

Improvement in the city's health since 1935, when Dr. Ruhland took over direction of the Health Department, is truly phenomenal. In that period the number of deaths per thousand population has dropped by roughly one-fourth. This means that thousands of lives have been saved. Of course, the steady advance of medical science, improved nutrition and so forth tend to send the death rate down. But the rate for the District has tumbled with extraordinary rapidity in the last seven years, after showing very little improvement for a long time. In this period, too, Washington's gains have outstripped those of many comparable cities behind which we were previously lagging. These facts speak for themselves. They are an indisputable testimonial to the good work done by Dr. Ruhland and his co-workers.

It is true that Dr. Ruhland has never been able to put his whole program into effect for want of funds. But enough has been done to show that miracles in community service can be performed even when modest sums are made available to conscientious and professionally competent administrators. A substantial measure of credit goes to the Commissioners and the legislators who have made expansion of the health program possible. But most of the initiative, planning and energy behind that program have come from Dr. Ruhland and his able lieutenants. We think they are entitled to a community vote of thanks. And it is scarcely necessary to add that further efforts by the Senators who investigated Gallinger Hospital to oust Dr. Ruhland in the face of this record would be a tragic fiasco.

Democracy At Home

Revival of interest in the Sumners-Capper resolution in Congress is offset by the blunt statement of the Budget Bureau that this effort to enfranchise several hundred thousand Americans is not in accord with the President's program. This report comes to light after concealment for six months. Nevertheless, it stands out in shocking contrast to the President's current interest in votes for soldiers. In his radio speech the other night he scorned the idea that the framers of the Constitution intended "to take away the franchise of any of those who are fighting to preserve the Constitution itself." Now those who are thus fighting include thousands of men from the District. Yet the Budget Bureau asserts in effect that the President wants to keep these fighting American citizens disfranchised, not merely for one election, but apparently for the indefinite future.

Against this dark background, however, is a considerably brighter outlook for suffrage legislation on Capitol Hill. Since Chairman Van Nuys of the Senate Judiciary Committee came out for the Sumners-Capper resolution, Senators Wiley and Wherry have also expressed sympathy with its aims. Less than three years ago the Judiciary Committee unanimously rejected an older version of the Sumners-Capper resolution. Now that solid front has been broken and the problem of getting representation in Congress and the Electoral College for Washington's disfranchised citizens has once more been submitted to active study.

We think that caution is necessary, however, to prevent any working at cross purposes between groups trying to get the vote for the District. There is no conflict whatever between this proposed constitutional amendment to secure national representation and the McCarran home-rule bill. They are separate facets of the general problem of Americanizing the Capital. Either one could be approved and put into operation without the other. While consideration of the two measures may properly go forward at the same time, therefore, it would be a serious mistake to tie them together. Home rule, which can be granted by simple legislation, should not be retarded because national representation must follow the slower and more difficult course of constitutional amendment.

Nor should the Sumners-Capper resolution displace the Walter bill designed to give the District a delegate in Congress. This measure, which is still lodged in the House Judiciary Committee, looks to the establishment of a quick liaison between Congress and the people of the District. Its enactment would be a sound step toward achievement of more basic reforms. So it is not a question of choosing one of several bills. The simple truth is that enactment of all of them is urgently needed to bring the Capital back into the circle of democracy. The amazing thing is that there should be any question about restoring suffrage to this teeming city at a time when we are sacrificing American lives for the preservation of democracy as a world force.

Lo! The Mouse

Pressure of public opinion rather than pressure of events precipitated the reorganization of the Department of State which was announced with such a flourish on Saturday night. Events had left the top foreign service mind with its thought patterns still intact. These are hidebound. In spite of Saturday's reshuffle, they will remain hidebound. For the present State Department is like the old man who explained his continuing record as a liberal on the ground that he was too conservative to change. The State Department has almost a vested interest in its own conservatism. The President knows it. Not long after Pearl Harbor he is said to have joked to a friend that his State Department was neutral in this war and he hoped it would at least remain that way. But the mold had become so moldy in the eyes of the American people that the call for reorganization seeping into State Department cloisters couldn't be denied. Something had to be done about it. So the Department, with a repugnance that was hard to conceal, set to work some months ago to shake itself, and, what is more, to put the shakeup on paper. The mental exercise, according to rumor, had to be stimulated from time to time by outside needling. At last, however, the fruit thereof has been given to the public through the medium of radio, as the subject matter of the second in a series of broadcasts: "The Department of State Speaks."

The manner of the unfoldment, as any listener will avow, was anything but conservative. In point of literal fact, it was in the current style of radio salesmanship whereby the listener is given preliminary hints that what the great American public has long been waiting for will be vouchsafed at the end of the program, if he can possess his soul in patience. The revelation comes out when the listener is supposed to be on the verge of breathless exhaustion. He is then stunned with the climactic news of something entirely new and indispensable and record-shattering and historic—anything from a new eyewash to the latest idea in prefabricated housing. Drew Pearson in his radio talks has adapted the new technique in preparing the American mind for his Sunday prophecies. That the State Department should ape the artist in commercial plugs is something to be wondered at. But that it should take a leaf out of Mr. Pearson's copybook—without, of course, Mr. Pearson's skill—shows what the world is coming to. To be fair with the State Department, however, it must be said that the Department has gone them all one better. The Great American Public is right there in the studio in the person of a professional announcer. He steers the performers, expresses the breathlessness of the waiting and muted world, and bangs the cymbals at the approach to the finale. Certainly the State Department deserves to be rated a pioneer in this gentle art of squeezing the maximum merit out of what it is seeking to sell the customers.

The customers on Saturday got their money's worth in the form of a double feature. There was the initial display of the grand design of the reorganization. On paper it looks imposing. Structurally there can have been no change like it in the last half century. The new scaffolding is as dazzling to the eye as a cathedral, and aside, from the buildup, cannot fail to impress. The jaundice with which we regard it isn't due to the reorganization, but has to do with the men in it. They are precisely the same persons who upheld the organization which has now been levelled to the ground. So the end-result of this architectural metamorphosis boils down to a serried retitling of the same officials. The more it changes, the more it is the same thing. Did the State Department in its groove of aloofness mistake the outside din as a demand for new sticks and stones? We wonder. If it did, its ears were wrongly attuned to the agitation without its walls. What was required, if our ears don't deceive us, was a change in personnel at the top. The facade, as we found from that transformation labelled FEA, is immaterial as long as the individuals within remain the same.

The sequence in Saturday's performance—indeed, the piece de resistance—was equally bereft of meaning, and, in sober fact, hadn't even the magic of novelty. Here the appearance was given of the introduction of new blood into the Department. The incomers as currently mentioned are to make up a committee of advisers to the Secretary of State in postwar policy. They are well-known names, rare in lore of various kinds, rich in experience, and ripe in years. In short, they are "safe." They couldn't be otherwise, since most of them were custodians of diplomatic tradition long before the present and confirmed practitioners cut their teeth on that sacred cow. Surely the Department can't call any of them "new blood." (What, by the way, can the President, who once took an historic stand against three score years and ten, think of the hoary appendage that Mr. Hull has attached to the Department for the purpose of charting with him a dynamic path through a new world?) Nor could the blood be called old new blood. Actually, the alleged appointees have been serving the Department in precisely the same capacity as that to which they are now assigned. It's like those storekeepers who display as new goods the specialties of last season which had been gathering dust on the shelves. Everybody in the Capital knows that these outside committees were Sumner Welles' babies. Thus this particular sequence is as unpretty a piece of deception as has yet come out of this Administration. It will destroy any remaining confidence in the sincerity of Government reshuffles.

Altogether the prestidigitator has turned operatic, and if the public thinks that on Saturday "The Department of State Speaks" was a sign that "the Department of State Moves," they will be paying tribute only to illusion. The blunt fact is that as the reorganization stands at the present showing the Department hasn't budged an inch, despite the clear indication that the world as a whole is moving with airplane speed.

Wallace Looks Ahead

Vice President Wallace devoted a large part of his address at the CIO Political Action luncheon to praise of the Administration's war production record and accomplishments in keeping down living costs. There is good reason to suspect that his defense of the OPA fell on insensitive and unsympathetic ears. Nevertheless the purpose of his remarks is plain. Less apparent is the motive behind his verbal castigation of unnamed big business isolationists who are allegedly hostile to the President and who harbor designs of renewing their broken ties with German trusts as soon as the war is over. He indicates that these plotters are the men who will possess huge financial reserves after the war and control so many new inventions that in the postwar period many businesses and communities "will be able to exist only by grace of their sufferance."

Although it would have been a political faux pas, Mr. Wallace might with equal plausibility have drawn a sinister picture of postwar America in bondage to labor czars and existing "only by grace of their sufferance." There is an element of truth, of course, in the picture that Mr. Wallace so luridly painted as well as in the contrasting piece that he might have sketched. But it is difficult to see how any legitimate end is served by exaggerated forecasts that play upon class fears and hatreds. Certainly such diatribes are a poor sort of introduction to Mr. Wallace's concluding sober appeal to labor to work with business in demanding prompt and effective consideration of postwar reconversion and employment problems.

In discussing these problems Mr. Wallace, like most of us, does not get beyond a general statement of their nature and the need for action. Probably that is all we can expect at this time. The actual detail work connected with every aspect of contract termination is extremely laborious and time consuming. The Office of War Mobilization, aided by Mr. Baruch, is working with existing agencies to speed progress and has just announced a program for uniform termination of contracts. However, many connected problems remain in the discussion stage such as questions of surplus disposal and the disposition to be made of Government owned plants.

Mr. Wallace is giving excellent advice in urging organized labor to participate actively in discussion of these problems and make its voice felt in the formulation of policies. His cautious suggestion that Congress might well consider setting up a special reconversion plant corporation to facilitate rapid transition from war to peace production appears to assume that the transition will be so abrupt as to necessitate many and widespread adjustments. At the same time he notes, however, that limited reconversion is already in process. This is indeed the case. Before the war on all fronts is over solutions may thus be found, by accident or design, for a good many of the problems that worry Mr. Wallace. For, as General Ayres of the Cleveland Trust Co. points out, much reconversion will result from shifts in military demands, not related to any master plan.

Mr. Wallace is probably overcredulous in believing that it would be feasible to make provision by advance planning for hundreds of thousands of persons thrown out of work by termination of Government war contracts. But he is to be commended for stressing the need for uniform and consistent policies for dealing with reconversion problems as they arise. His acknowledgement of the need for postwar tax relief to permit industrial expansion of young enterprises, with resultant increase of employment and of national income also shows a realistic appreciation of the fundamental identity of interest between capital and labor in the postwar era. If he had begun as well as ended on that note his speech would have been less political and more persuasive.

THE WORDS WE SPEAK

It is the tongue that matters, having words
To draw these glittering pictures everywhere—
The sunset change, the flight of autumn birds,
The fragile flake that swims the winter air.

The breath has ways: it shapes a word, a frame
Of uttered sound with which it may impart
The years of groping; it may find a name
For the still sorrow poised within the heart.

A year of sky, with earth beneath, goes down:
The words are shining arrows we have hurled
Against time's armor . . . and their old renown
Flares up before us, and they shake the world.

Selective Service

By Mark Sullivan

What It Means

WHAT IS "selective service"? The recommendation of it by President Roosevelt was merely in broad terms. How it would actually work can be learned from the principal bill in Congress providing for it. (This bill, incidentally, is sponsored by two Republicans, Senator Warren R. Austin of Vermont and Representative James W. Wadsworth of New York.)

Very briefly, and loosely, selective service would start with the draft law, as it now applies to young men for the purpose of fighting. Selective service would extend the draft law, so as to cover practically every adult person, for the purpose of war industry. Selective service would cover all males between 18 and 65 (with exemptions much the same as those provided for soldiers.) It would cover all women between 18 and 50 (with exemptions for women pregnant, women with dependent young children, and some others). All these would be subject to draft for work in war industry.

IS SELECTIVE SERVICE NEEDED? On that, the best authority to rely on consists of those responsible for conducting the war, including the procurement of necessary arms and other supplies—in short, the Army and Navy. The Army and Navy say they want selective service. It is expected that Secretary of War Stimson will say so, again, to a committee of Congress the coming week. The Army knows; and the Army has no interest except to win the war. It is probable the Army and Navy, especially the Army, wants selective service very earnestly, perhaps even more earnestly than they say. For the fact is, the hardest part of the war is ahead of us. The Army needs more supplies, of particular kinds. It also needs more soldiers—and selective service is a way of getting more soldiers. By selective service, civilians above the draft age can be substituted for men under the draft age now working in industry.

Will Congress pass a selective service act? As of today, the general impression is, no. The atmosphere is not favorable. For this condition, there are definite reasons.

A principal reason centers around President Roosevelt's record about labor and strikes. Mr. Roosevelt now recommends selective service on the ground, among others, that it will prevent strikes in wartime. This recommendation comes late—for three years Mr. Roosevelt opposed selective service. Congress thinks the belated conversion is an effort by Mr. Roosevelt to avert the consequences of a policy about labor and strikes which he has followed since the war began. Congress knows that throughout the war, and before, Mr. Roosevelt prevented or frustrated every move in Congress to write a law dealing with wartime strikes or otherwise regulating labor unions and labor leaders. Again and again, Congress started to write such legislation; again and again Mr. Roosevelt maneuvered successfully to prevent it. When finally, last June, an exasperated Congress passed such legislation, the Smith-Connally bill, the President vetoed it, and it had to be passed over his veto.

CONGRESS now sees Mr. Roosevelt recommend selective service as a way of preventing strikes. The idea is, for example, that if there should be another coal strike, like the several last summer, the President could clap the selective service law on the miners, thus drafting them and compelling them to continue to mine coal.

To Congress, and to others, this seems an indirect, awkward, and otherwise undesirable way of preventing strikes. In order to penalize or discipline a quite small number of persons, namely, those who strike, Mr. Roosevelt asks Congress to pass a law which could bear down not only on the small number who have struck or would strike, but on the whole adult population of the country. Congress would prefer an act dealing directly and specifically with strikes.

But the fact remains, selective service is desired by the Army and Navy, not merely for the sake of preventing strikes, or even primarily for that purpose. The Army wants selective service for the sake of better use of the country's manpower and womanpower in the war effort.

Reviving Prohibition

Referring to your editorial on the Bryson bill, to revive prohibition for the duration of the war, I think that either it or liquor rationing would be a good thing. This is despite the fact that I take a drink occasionally and have always been opposed to prohibition.

I have been working since 1910. During most of that time I have been with the Government, but I have never seen so much boozing on the clock and absenteeism due to liquor as there is now. Men and women leave during working hours and go together to cafes, cocktail lounges, and plain saloons and sometimes come back pretty high and there is nothing said or done about it. Of course conditions are worse on the night shifts than they are during the day. Hidden around some of the locker rooms there are many "dead soldiers" as you will find on a battlefield. I found four within 10 feet of my locker yesterday, and I had not killed them.

Winter Warfare

By Paul Schubert

Russia's Specialty

TO APPRECIATE fully what Russia is accomplishing this winter, we must realize that this campaign was planned months ago, during the summer. The plan was based upon Russia's experience of winter warfare a year ago, in the campaign which drove the Germans west of the Donetz. That campaign, in turn, was based upon the experience of the year before.

Russia has now got what amounts to a "second team" to throw into action during the winter months.

THERE IS nothing new about this idea. The novelty lies in equipping and training this "team" for offensive action and warfare of winter mobility. Up to now the elite troops of European continental armies have been the "storm" and "line" regiments which have done the combat work of great summer campaigns. Traditionally, European armies seek "winter quarters" with the end of summer, and rest and refurnish themselves for the work of the year to come. When combat formations have been withdrawn from the front for the winter, they have been replaced by holding troops of lesser quality—troops good enough to act as sentries throughout the monotonous winter months, to guard against surprise, but lacking the power needed for new offensive enterprises. In the spring, the "first team" has taken over the job again.

Under modern conditions, this exchange has been more figurative than literal. Generals have, however, accepted the idea that major campaigning was off for the winter.

Not so the Russians. The Russians have made their "second team" into an attack weapon. As often happens, the "second team" is now fully as good as the first, perhaps better. Certainly it is tremendously aided by the fact that the German winter team is far less effective than the German summer team.

TO BUILD their special winter combat team, the Russians needed three ingredients—all of which they had. First, manpower—it takes a tremendous "squad" to field two equally good teams. Second, equipment—from top to bottom the Russian winter army has its own special gear, transport adapted to snow terrain, aircraft with ski landing gear, airdromes equipped to keep motors going at 40 below, clothing and sleeping equipment to keep men going at 40 below, food, tactics, weapons . . . everything needed to lend mobility to huge armies through whatever obstacles winter offers, and bring them to the foe with combat superiority. Third, training—only a country which can train such troops under arctic conditions during the summer, can prepare for winter warfare of this nature. The problem of teaching and conditioning tens of thousands of men to use skis is only one detail of the training.

As for the Germans, they are short in manpower. When it comes to special equipment for winter warfare, they face a detail to strain their already overburdened industry. As for training, they do have winter terrain in the Alps—but not the terrain offered to the Russians by Siberia. Winter warfare is a Russian specialty.

Kansas Point Of View

It is a long-standing custom among politicians to visit various parts of the country to sound out public opinion. Due to restrictions on travel and the necessity for staying close to Washington to keep up with the pressing details of administration, it has not been possible for politicians to keep in as close touch with the general public as before. This is a bad thing for the politicians and a most unfortunate circumstance for the general public because there has been a gradual drawing away by our political leaders from the real needs and thoughts and viewpoints of the majority of the American people. The result is that our Government no longer represents public opinion as it is today.

Because of this I feel that people in different regions should make the effort to bring their thoughts and opinions to the attention of our elected officials. It is with this thought in mind that I will try to express as briefly and as concisely as possible what I believe to be the opinion of the majority of the Kansas mothers.

I do not want to create the impression that the opinions are those strictly and exclusively of the mothers of Kansas. I am convinced these views are shared by the majority of all the people of Kansas and those in neighboring States. Yet I would hesitate to speak for as large a group as this. Instead, by limiting myself to the Kansas mothers I believe I can speak with greater authority.

The women of Kansas have watched with disapproval the failures, the blunders and the lack of unity and cooperation in our national Government.

We have had a Government policy guided by compromise and appeasement. The pressure groups have been satisfied and quieted. The Government policy has been to do what is easiest and most convenient rather than what is best and most necessary. The capitulation by the Government to John L. Lewis is a glaring example of this national policy of compromising national interest and welfare to the selfish demands of one pressure group. Less sensational compromises have been made right along, and although they may have been less sensational they have been just as detrimental to the national economy and interest. National economy has never been an important consideration in the Administration of President Roosevelt. He has always spent liberally of Government money to finance pet schemes of his own or his wife for social reform. The people of Kansas often opposed these trends toward socialism and always disapproved squandering public money for unnecessary purposes.

Kansas mothers are particularly concerned about the war and the management of the home front. They want to make sure that their boys are fighting under circumstances which will be least dangerous and most advantageous to them. They want to know that efforts are being made to keep the country in a condition which will make the home-coming of those boys a cheerful and happy prospect. They want to be convinced that when our sons return they will return to a country that is sound financially and has favorable prospects for their future.

The present Administration has not provided us with the assurance we need. There has been too much bickering, too much compromise with special interests and pressure groups, too much fighting among the bureaucrats and too many Washington officials playing politics.

The New Deal has outlived its usefulness and we need a reshuffling of the deck. We need to get out of Washington those individuals who believe that our country can best be run by the guiding hands of a few inspired individuals. We need to get into the high offices of national government men who are convinced that our country is self-reliant and the people are capable of managing their own affairs. We need national leaders who trust the wisdom of the mass of the people and have confidence in free enterprise and private initiative.

We need, too, a revival of religious spirit and character development for the people of our Nation. Such a revival should have its inspiration from our central Government. Our churches can support but cannot initiate such a movement. Our schools can help but cannot give public enthusiasm to this need. We need to introduce to our people once more the simple and common virtues of honesty, truth and tolerance. We have been living in an artificial and superficial paradise. Our people have abandoned standards of common decency, good morals and right living.

For such a decline in the moral and spiritual standards of our national life, our present Government is not entirely to blame except for its failure to recognize a general trend and do something to halt it. The Government has adopted a negative attitude toward these things. We need a Government which will recognize the spiritual and moral needs of our people and provide the inspiration and leadership which people must have to arouse in them the enthusiasm for the good things of life.

Soldiers Want to Vote

Citizens in the services want to vote. I am certain that there will be a large service vote if enabling legislation is passed in close cooperation with the States. I question the necessity of all this talk and ranting on the subject. The ones to decide are those who have the hardest job to do, and it seems to me that this indicated that the final word on this problem should emanate from the services themselves. They, in turn, should be guided by the desires of the officer and enlisted personnel. If this means that one large ballot with every State ticket on it has to be used, under such conditions that each soldier will mark his own State ticket, this will save making a separate ballot for each State. Residence, poll tax, mailing requirements, can be satisfied. It is true that security measures will have to be taken, both at the source and at the polling places. These are mechanical matters of importance. They can be solved only if other factors are carefully handled at each stage where trouble might develop. But, the job can be done if all the agencies involved will cooperate early in the game.

Religious Fanaticism

One of the dangerous elements which cannot safely be ignored after the war is religious fanaticism. Contrary to popular propagandists, Fascists are generally intensely religious. This was true of the Ku Klux Klan. Those parts of the world which at present are cooperating more or less closely with the Hitler regime are also all dominantly religious. The man most directly responsible for Hitler being appointed chancellor, which gave him his first big start, was Franz von Papen, one of the leading lay churchmen of Germany.

If Americans make the mistake of ignoring this issue, or suppress it on the theory of "religious freedom," we shall have no lasting peace. The issue of "God and Country" has always been on the shields of the oppressors.

Posting The Books

By J. M. Lalley

Mexican Mirage

"SUNBURST," by Mauricio Magdaleno; translated from the Spanish by Anita Brenner. (Viking Press, $2.50.)

If the evocation of pity and terror is still the test, then this story of a Mexican Indian village must be counted one of the few great novels of these times, and it will be interesting to see how much longer it remains unnoticed. The advertisement on the jacket suggests that since it deals with a dispossessed and uprooted peasanty, Senor Magdaleno's book might be considered "a Mexican Grapes of Wrath." This, I think, is the first time I have known a blurb-writer to sin grievously by too faint praise, though perhaps the explanation is that the publishers of this excellent translation are also the publishers of Mr. Steinbeck's famous work. As a matter of justice, I think it should be said that El Resplandor was published in Mexico a good two years before The Grapes of Wrath appeared in the United States, and as a matter of taste or opinion, it strikes me as much the finer piece of literature.

But perhaps it might be well to give warning that this book is not for all stomachs. It is dark, bitter and vehement, animated by a fearful sincerity and nowhere relieved by humor or gaiety. Nor is there anywhere pause or slack in the momentum of the story; the reader is swept through scene after scene of violence, cruelty, lust, treachery, dolor, despair and death to the final catastrophic betrayal which overwhelms and destroys the children of San Andres de la Cal. There is an almost Sophoclean intensity and fatality to this tragedy of a people, and the San Andres Indians, though superstitious, ignorant and perverse, have nevertheless a tragic grandeur.

San Andres is an arid limestone wilderness somewhere in the highlands of Hidalgo. The history of its people is a history of hunger and pestilence. There is a curse on the country which has stopped the rains, dried the river beds and sterilized the soil. Legend ascribes the curse to the awful incestuous fury of Don Gonzalo Fuentes the conquistador and first lord of La Brisa, but long before the coming of the Spaniards, the Indians of San Andres had been waging a stupid and ceaseless war with a neighboring village over the few lands from which a living could be scratched. Yet in the bottom lands of La Brisa the earth is moist and opulent, and when La Brisa becomes a hacienda there is slavery for the Indians of both villages but less hunger, and there is fighting only on fiestas, when the pulque flows and they hack each other with machetes for the honor of the rival apostles who are their village patrons. At La Brisa the maguey and the corn flourish. Then in the great revolution nearly 400 years after the Conquest the hacienda is stormed, looted and destroyed; again the village is thinned by famine, plague and the civil wars. When the fires of revolution at last are spent peace and order of a sort return, but the good lands of La Brisa lie fallow and overgrown with weeds.

But now the hunger is accompanied by a strange wild hope. Some reflex of the new revolutionary ideas which have convulsed the country has shaken the Indians of San Andres out of their immemorial resignation. They await the deliverer who will give them lands, who will cause the barren earth to blossom and who will rule among them as their teacher and protector. And the saviour they await is a child of their own village, the son of a San Andres Indian and a white woman, an orphan of the early revolution, who was passed from one brown breast to another to be nourished and kept alive in time of famine. Later he had gone off to the government school where he would learn how to be a father to his people. Saturnino Herrera does indeed return to San Andres and his promises to his people are even fairer than their hopes. It is he who brings them the splendor, the vision of a new world that is like a sunburst. Saturnino Herrera has already been carried high on the tide of revolutionary politics and now is aiming at the governorship of Hidalgo. He tells the Indians they shall have their ejidos, as promised by the revolutionary constitution, that he will build a great irrigation dam to make their wilderness a garden and that the hacienda of La Brisa will be rebuilt as a great cooperative agricultural experimental station.

With cynical ingenuity he exploits their faith to his own political and material aggrandizement. The cunning and duplicity of this mestizo politician work far more havoc and desolation upon the people who have nourished and reared him, than even the harsh rule of Aztec or gachupin or the rapacity of the generals and bandits. With their own hands the infatuated Indians of San Andres forge the chains of a more terrible slavery than any they have yet known. And when they discover that they have been duped and betrayed it is too late.

The barbarities of the taskmaster their kinsman has set over them provoke the Indians to a momentary and futile revolt. It draws upon them a fearful vengeance. Their village is set in flames, their elders are hanged to the cacti and the survivors driven to the sierras to subsist on insects and reptiles. Then the marvels of mechanized farming are introduced at La Brisa and the peons find they have outlived their usefulness even as slaves. By way of final insult the very name of their habitation with its centuries of sacred association is taken from them and the place is called for the man who has deceived and betrayed them. As the book closes the San Andres Indians, these meek of whom it is said they shall inherit the earth, seem doomed to extinction.

Congress And Taxes

By Ernest Lindley

The Budget And Social Security

IN THE EARLY 'thirties an annual Treasury deficit of two or three billion dollars was widely considered alarming. The speeches by conservative Senators and Representatives, not to mention others, on the disastrous results which would inevitably follow such immense deficits would fill a good-sized library.

LINDLEY

During the fiscal year 1943, ended last June 30, the deficit was more than 57 billion dollars. This fiscal year, according to the will top 58 billion. Next year, according to the present estimate, it will approximate 59 billion.

Obviously these deficits cannot be reduced by cutting down expenditures. Approximately 90 per cent of the money the Federal Government is spending this year and will spend next year is going directly into the war. Most of the remaining 10 per cent consists of interest on the Federal debt, veterans' benefits, and allowances for tax refunds. For the next fiscal year, the other expenses of the Federal Government are expected to total about three billion dollars, or only about 3 per cent of the total budget. This 3 per cent includes payments to farmers, Federal public works (a small program of projects contributing to the prosecution of the war), and all other general expenses of the Government.

CONGRESS almost certainly will not cut the war budget. That can be reduced only as the fortunes of war permit and will not drop much until some months after at least one enemy has been defeated. It cannot very well cut the interest on the Federal debt, and almost certainly it will not reduce payments to veterans. Likewise it cannot afford to cut the allowance for tax refunds, because if the refunds are valid under existing law, they will have to be made. If the pending amendments to the Renegotiation Act should become law, an even greater allowance would have to be made for tax refunds.

This leaves only about 3 per cent of the budget on which Congress can practice economies. And as this covers all other expenditures of the Government and already has been cut fine by the Budget Bureau, the economies made here almost certainly will be relatively trivial.

The only way in which Congress can reduce the deficits is by levying more taxes. The additional $10 or $11 in taxes asked by the President is not too much, in view of the fact that our national income is approaching 150 billion dollars a year. Now, when incomes, both individual and corporate, are running at a record high, is the time to collect more taxes.

Congress is not only disinclined to impose much additional taxation. If it continues on its present course, it may actually cut down the revenues of the Government. The amendments to the Renegotiation Act now pending would take away from the Treasury a large part of the two billion-odd dollars that the tax bill, in its present form, would bring in. The loss to the Treasury might even exceed the gain.

IN ADDITION, Congress seems intent on repealing a tax increase it had previously approved: the rise in the Social Securtiy tax levied equally on employers and employes. The increase was to have become effective January 1, Congress delayed it for 60 days, and the trend on the Hill now is decidedly toward delaying it until next year, if not longer. This is the tax which supports, or is supposed to support, the old age and survivors insurance system.

This is the ideal time for strengthening and expanding the social insurance system, by increasing the payroll taxes, bringing additional groups of workers into the system, and providing new types of insurance, especially against disabilities and possibly also against the costs of medical care. The additional taxes can be absorbed easily. Insurance reserves can be built up. At the same time, the current revenue of the Treasury can be increased and inflationary pressure of excess buying power relieved.

Most of the improvements in the social insurance system proposed by the Administration have been discussed for years. Most of them are not controversial except as to detail — the most notable exception being insurance against the costs of medical care. That many of them will be adopted within a few years is rather generally conceded. By taking action now, Congress would not only help to cushion postwar adjustments: it would strengthen our public finances and place an additional control on inflation.

Father and Son Die Together Fighting Nazis

By Eddy Gilmore

Moscow, Jan. 16 (AP).—The story on the lips of many a Muscovite today is that of Emilian Lukich Sokol and his son Grigory, two simple soldiers.

The 40-year-old father and his son, 20, were in different units of the army and neither knew the other's whereabouts. A routine shifting of men occurred the other day, and they found themselves not only in the same company but in the very same squad, and both were gunners. They went into a trench together with machineguns.

Later father and son lay side-by-side in the snow, letting big German tanks rumble past, for they knew machineguns were useless against such monsters. Following the tanks came the gray waves of German infantry. Emilian and Grigory let them charge close. Then they let go with bullets, neither overlapping the other's arc of fire. The Germans started toppling like pins in a bowling-alley. But more tanks came up, charging Emilian and Grigory from an oblique angle. Father and son then aimed a small antitank gun which had been put there for just such an emergency, and started chopping down tanks. But both were killed.

Now it is announced officially that father and son were pothumously named Heroes of the Soviet Union.

AFL Meets Today; Lewis' Status Cloudy

Miami, Fla., Jan. 16 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor executive council opens its winter meeting tomorrow with an extensive agenda topped by problems of the reconversion and postwar periods, and the nine-months-old application of John L. Lewis for the readmission of his United Mine Workers of America.

The federation's postwar committee is expected to submit preliminary reports on matters which it believes should get the immediate attention of the Government, industry, and labor.

The council also will act on issues growing out of recent developments in war production, national service legislation, wages, prices, and subsidies.

Conflicting reports obscured the outlook on the Lewis application. Lewis has not substantially altered his contention that the UMW should be admitted "as is" and jurisdictional problems taken up later. This has been unacceptable to an influential group at the top in the federation, but Lewis is reported to have won some important support for his position in recent weeks.

Lewis and the AFL's negotiating committee have held only one meeting since the October convention empowered the executive council to deal finally with his application, after giving AFL affiliates a 30-day opportunity to file jurisdictional complaints against the UMW's sprawling District 50. More than a score of complaints were filed and have not been disposed of in negotiations with Lewis.

The meetings are expected to continue for 10 days to two weeks.

MacArthur Plane Has Refrigerator, Electric Kitchen

Sydney, Australia, Jan. 16 (AP).—Sydney people yesterday got a glimpse of General Douglas MacArthur's plane, which brought his wife here for the launching of the destroyer Bataan. It is a Flying Fortress known as the "Silver Bullet."

It has a lounge with chairs upholstered in red morocco, Pullman berths for night travel, and a kitchen complete with electric range and electric refrigerator.

The "Silver Bullet" recently flew from America to Australia in 39 hours.

Rifles to Reduce Park Elk and Deer Herds

Estes Park, Colo., Jan. 16 (INS).—Park rangers armed with high-powered rifles next Sunday will start the slaughter of 130 elk and 80 deer in Rocky Mountain National Park, reducing the size of herds to a number that can be sustained by the winter ranges.

Authority for the slaughter was received Saturday from Washington.

3 Orders by Nelson Indicate He Is Bossing Reconversion

By the Associated Press

Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board is beginning to make it clear that he is bossing war industry reconversion to civilian production, and that resumption of normal manufactures will be slower than anticipated.

Nelson's emergence was signaled in a series of directives he issued last week which blocked all plans for immediate, widespread resumption of civilian goods output.

Three Nelson orders, taken together, constitute a partial outline of his eventual reconversion program, while turning aside pressure for extensive reconversion now. They also left no doubt that Nelson is going ahead to put his program in operation, even though the White House has given no overt sign that the reconversion job is his.

An order continuing the ban on construction, another declaration against relaxing steel use restrictions for nonessential civilian products, and a third forbidding the channeling of permitted civilian manufactures to labor shortage areas, together constituted Nelson's developing pattern.

It also was announced by a WPB spokesman that reconversion would be discussed at a conference of 15 leading industrialists Nelson called for tomorrow.

The Nelson orders brought out that three factors stand in the way of immediate return to civilian production, even though raw materials in excess of war needs are available.

These are the desire of the military and production team to "keep fluid" to meet any unforeseen demands of the invasion; the labor shortage remaining in some areas; the severe "secondary shortages" of coal, oil, packaging materials and transportation, which widespread resumption of civilian manufactures would aggravate.

Hunger Quiets Wisconsin Prison Outbreak of 800

Waupun, Wis., Jan. 16 (AP).—Comparative quiet replaced last night's bedlam at Wisconsin's State prison today as 800 hungry inmates calmed enough for Warden L. F. Murphy to order two meals served.

The prisoners, locked in their cells yesterday after a riot was threatened, demonstrated violently last night, smashing windows and hurling debris from them.

Murphy said the crisis seemed to have passed, but that he and other prison officials were taking no chances. He planned to release the prisoners gradually tomorrow, and resume regular routine.

Parliament Hopes to Hear Churchill Soon

London, Jan. 16 (AP).—The news from Africa that Prime Minister Churchill has recovered completely from pneumonia stirred speculation today that he may make an early appearance before Parliament.

It was uncertain, however, that he would be present when Commons reconvenes shortly to tackle a stack of accumulated questions—including the invitation that, in his own interests, he delegate some of his heavy responsibilities to others. Clement R. Attlee, Deputy Prime Minister, will answer for Churchill if he has not returned by that time.

Minor ministerial changes are anticipated when he returns, but a major cabinet reconstruction appeared unlikely.

Minister of Agriculture B. S. Hudson has been under fire from farmer-critics who contend that farm prices are too low, and there is a motion pending for reconsideration of the farm price structure.

Legislative correspondents predict that two government bills will be in for heavy weather—one which would make compulsory the employment of a quota of disabled men and women, and another which would provide for reinstatement in civil employment of servicemen and women.

Battle is predicted over the government's 320-million-dollar educational reform bill, which is called the most comprehensive measure in the history of British education. Opponents say the measure is insufficient in that it fails to abolish all fees for secondary and higher educational institutions.

Government Quits Bomb-Pocked Sofia

Bern, Switzerland, Jan. 16 (AP).—The Bulgarian government has established headquarters at Tcham-Koria, a winter resort in the Rila mountains 43 miles southeast of Sofia, as a result of Allied air raids which have caused complete confusion in the capital, a Budapest correspondent reported tonight.

Most officials already have fled from Sofia, where 30 per cent of the buildings have been destroyed and 20 per cent damaged.

DIAGONALLY ACROSS FROM THE UNITED STATES TREASURY

January 22, 1867

The National Savings and Trust Company was founded Seventy-Seven Years Ago as the National Safe Deposit Company, under an Act of Congress signed by Rutherford B. Hayes, nineteenth President of the United States.

In 1891 the Company absorbed the old National Savings Bank. In 1907 an Act of Congress signed by President Theodore Roosevelt permitted a change in name to the National Savings and Trust Company.

From its inception, this Bank began to lay a solid foundation of helpful public service, with understanding and vision. Its growth has been steady—through years of peace and prosperity—through wars and depressions. From year to year it has faithfully mirrored changes in the Nation's Capital; in the City's life and thought, in the scale and scope of its achievements and aspirations. It has reflected the advances, too, in Banking and Trust Services.

It is a far cry from the small, three-story structure of 1867 to today's bank building with the green patina-covered clock tower known throughout the world.

Through the years this financial institution has remained at the corner which cradled its start—"diagonally across from the United States Treasury"—serving faithfully—steadfast to that fundamental principle of helpful public service with which it began—a principle as permanent with this Bank as its Charter of Perpetual Existence.

Terranova and Angott Must Defend NBA Titles

The National Boxing Association decreed today that Phil Terranova, featherweight king, and Sammy Angott, NBA lightweight champion, must defend their titles against "worthy contenders" within a month.

Abe J. Greene, NBA president, said that if Terranova and Angott fail to "lay their titles on the line" the association will declare their championships vacant.

Greene's statement, released with the quarterly NBA ratings, criticized overweight, nontitle contests involving champions and fighters near the top of their divisions, according to the Associated Press.

He called the forthcoming Angott-Beau Jack nontitle lightweight bout "a farce." Jack is recognized as the division champion in New York State.

The new ratings showed a few changes. Bobby Ruffin climbed several notches in the lightweight division because of his victory over Jack, and Lulu Constantino moved to the head of the "outstanding boxers" list among the lightweights.

Ruffin, Jack, Bob Montgomery of Philadelphia and Luther "Slugger" White of Baltimore, were named the "logical contenders" for Angott's crown. Willie Pep, now in the Navy; Chalky Wright, Los Angeles Negro, and Sal Bartola of Boston are NBA's top choices to challenge Terranova.

Greene reiterated the NBA policy of "freezing" the titles of boxers now in the armed services. Champions in military uniform include Heavyweight Joe Louis, Army; Light Heavyweight Gus Lesnevich, Coast Guard; Middleweight Tony Zale, Navy, and Welterweight Freddie Cochrane, Navy.

The ratings:

Heavyweights—Champion, Louis; logical contenders, Billy Conn, Army; Jimmy Bivins, Cleveland; outstanding boxers, Tami Mauriello, New York; Melio Bettina, Army; Leo Q. Murray, New Haven; Turkey Thompson, Los Angeles; Lee Savold, Des Moines, Iowa.

Light-Heavyweights—Champion, Gus Lesnevich, Coast Guard; logical contenders, Freddie Mills, England; Joe Maxim, Army; outstanding boxers, Lloyd Marshall, Anto Christoforidis, Navy; Bobby Jacobs, Pennsylvania; Nate Boldin, Illinois; Coley Welch, Maine; Johnny Colan, Coast Guard, and Billy Soose, Navy.

Middleweights—Champion, Tony Zale, Navy; logical contenders, George Abrams, Navy; Jake La Motta, New York; Holman Williams, Michigan; Tony Martin, Coast Guard; Jose Basora, Puerto Rico; outstanding boxers, Steve Belloise, New York; Kid Tunero, Puerto Rico; Ernie Vigh, Coast Guard; Freddie Apostoli, Navy, and Reuben Shank, Coast Guard.

Lightweights—Champion, Angott; logical contenders, Ruffin, Jack, Montgomery and White; outstanding boxers, Costantino, Willie Joyce, Illinois; Juan Zurita, Mexico, and Ike Williams, New York.

Welterweights—Champion, Cochrane; logical contender, Ray Robinson, Army; outstanding boxers, Jackie Wilson, Army; Marty Servo, Coast Guard; Fritzie Zivic, Pennsylvania.

Featherweights—Champion, Terranova, New York; logical contenders, Pep, Wright and Bartola; outstanding boxers, Mike Raffa, Army, and Harry Jaffra, Baltimore.

Bantamweights—Champion, Manuel Ortiz, California; logical contenders, Rush Dalma, Philippines, and Keu Kong Young, Hawaii; outstanding boxers, Little Dado, Philippines; Benny Goldberg, Michigan; Carlos Chavez, Army, and Tony Olivera, California.

Raleigh Site Of Conference Court Tourney

Durham, N. C., Jan. 16 (AP).—The Southern Conference's basketball committee decided today to hold the conference's annual tournament in Memorial Auditorium at Raleigh February 24-26.

There has been some question whether the tourney would be held this year, due to a current lack of interest in the sport.

"The committee, after a thorough discussion of the basketball situation," said Eddie Cameron, acting director of athletics at Duke and chairman of the committee, "decided it would be best to continue the annual tournament."

Cameron added that the committee believed the circuit could provide eight teams of nearly even caliber.

The tournament will be held along the same lines as in former years, with one exception. In the past all first-round games have been staged on opening day with two contests in the afternoon and the other two at night.

This year two of the opening round games will be played on Thursday night and the remaining two on Friday afternoon. Semi-final games are scheduled for Friday night, and the championship game on Saturday night.

Ball Players Back From Alaska Where Army Still Talks Series

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Frankie Frisch, manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, is back in town with glowing reports of a six-week tour of Alaska and the Aleutians where Dixie Walker of Brooklyn, Hank Borowy of the Yankees, Danny Litwhiler and Stan Musial of the Cardinals joined him in a series of walkie-talkie fanning bees with servicemen under auspices of the USO camp shows.

The major leaguers found the boys eager to talk about the national game and were hard pressed to answer such queries as "What happened to the Cardinals? and "How about Brooklyn?"

"Moving pictures of the 1943 world series went over big," said Frisch. "The boys really got hot as our sessions warmed up. Musial had to explain a hundred times how St. Louis happened to lose to the Yankees. It was a great experience. We had a fine time and I think the boys did too."

The usual routine, according to Frisch, was to set up a showing of the movies, perhaps walking a few miles from the last stand, and then hold an open forum in which all hands were free to ask questions on baseball.

Ring's Nat Fleischer To Get Boxing Award

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Nat Fleischer, editor and publisher of Ring Magazine, will receive an award from the New York Boxing Writers Association at their annual dinner on Wednesday night. The award is in recognition of his 39 years of service to boxing.

The Fleischer award is in addition to the Edward J. Neil memorial plaque which this year has been awarded to all boxers in the armed services.

Bears' Spurt In 3d Period Wins, 39 to 28

The Lichtman Bears defeated the fast Kingston Colonials yesterday at Turner's Arena, 39-28, before 1100 fans. Bill McKeever, who at one time held the Madison Square Garden scoring record, placed the Kingstons in a 6-point lead at the start, and was good for 9 of their 13 points in the first of three periods.

Johnny Isaacs and Zack Clayton were too hot, however, evening the count and drawing away to a 16-13 lead as the period closed. The latter bringing the crowd to its feet with uncanny shots from sidecourt.

Bob Pasterchuck, former St. John's star, and Nick Lapolla evened the count at 20-all early in the second period, but Charlie Isles, who came in fresh for Puggy Bell, tapped in two baskets in quick succession, enabling Isaacs to come on and put the Bears in front, 29-24, as the whistle blew to end the second period.

In the final the Bears retained possession of ball in one of their famous passing attacks, then passed it to Pop Gates and Dolly King for baskets to put the game on ice, Mike Tighe, the former Georgetown freshman ace, being the only member of the Colonial team to score. The Bears will meet the Mets from Baltimore next week.

Perry Unawed By Creelman Assignment

Calm, confident Aaron Perry, the finest, young colored lightweight to come up locally in years, is anything but overawed over his nine-round boxing bout with Victor Creelman at Uline Arena Friday night.

Perry personally asked or Creelman at Uline Arena Friday night.

Perry personally asked for Creelman when the injured Billy Banks withdrew from the originally scheduled 10-round bout Saturday, and shrugs off claims advanced by many that he has been overmatched.

Perry was boxing in the amateurs less than a year ago, but caught on quickly as a pro while sweeping 10 consecutive bouts. Many admirers of Perry recently have predicted that he could whip either Creelman or Banks if the match could be made.

Harry Garsh, veteran manager of Perry who once handled high ranking Bruce Flowers, shares Perry's belief that he is ready for big game.

"I sincerely believe it would have been unfair to have continued to match Aaron Perry with run-of-the-mine fighters," Garsh says, "he has all the self-confidence and ability needed to step with good lightweights now."

Creelman, winner of 34 successive bouts before losing to Banks on split decision last Monday, is working out in Stillman's gymnasium, New York.

Ice Falcons' Johnny Baby Plenty Tough

A fast 15-man squad that entertains high hopes of an upset of the formidable United States Coast Guard Cutters will represent Coach Red Mackenzie's Philadelphia Falcons in tomorrow night's ice hockey match at Uline Arena at 8:30.

Mackenzie coached the Washington Eagles at Riverside Stadium between 1939-42.

Probably the most colorful player among the invading Falcons is pugnacious Johnny (Rock 'Em) Baby, powerhouse defenseman from northern Ontario's coper mining country.

"Rock Em" set an all time Eastern Hockey League record against the Olympics in Boston recently when he was embroiled in four fist fights in a single match before finally being expelled from the rink.

Capt. Johnny (Choo Choo) Mariucci, Frankie Brimsek, Art Coulter, Alex Motter and Ossie Asmundson are former National Hockey League stars who will be back on the ice with the Coast Guard.

Immaculate, Nativity Basketball Winners

Immaculate Conception defeated St. Stephen's, 16-13, in a hard-fought game in the Catholic Parochial League yesterday, while St. Thomas came through with an easy 24-7 victory over Calvert and Nativity triumphed over St. John's, 10 to 8.

Subpar 68 Boosts Lead; Finals Today

San Francisco, Jan. 16 (AP).—Burning up the course with a third successive below-par round, Byron Nelson of Toledo, Ohio, increased his lead over the field today with a 54-hole total of 205 in the $10,000 San Francisco Victory Open golf tournament.

Nelson's four-under-par 68 for the Harding Park public links gave him a five-stroke advantage over his closest rival, Harold "Jug" McSpaden of Philadelphia, and virtually clinched him top money of the rich tournament, barring a complete breakdown of his game in tomorrow's final 18-hole round.

A gallery estimated at more than 7000 fans elbowed each other in a mad rush to follow the former National Open and Professional Golfers' Association champion whose successive 68-69 and 68 enabled him to hold the lead from the start.

Finishes With Five

He obliged the largest turnout in local golf history by rounding the first nine today in 34 and coming up the eighteenth fairway five under par. His only poorly played hole of the day proved to be the last. On the green in 2 and with a 35-foot putt, he elected to play safe and putted weakly, the ball stopping 5 feet away from the cup. He missed the next and went down for a bogey 5, costing him what would have been a 67 and the finest round of the tournament.

Par for the course is 36-36-72.

Nelson, favorite from the start, gained two strokes today over McSpaden, winner of the recent Los Angeles open. McSpaden carded his third straight 70 for a 210, which was a shot better than that of the former New York Yankee baseball player, Sam Byrd of Detroit, who added a 69 to 73 and 69.

Mangrum Fourth

Slender Lloyd Mangrum of Monterey Park, Calif., who goes into the Army Tuesday, took over fourth place with a 71 and 212 total while Art Bell, San Francisco and George Fazio, Pine Valley, N. J., shared fifth position with a total of 215.

After being well up among the leaders for the first two rounds, little Harry Cooper of Minneapolis hacked away some of his chances by taking a 76 which gave him a three round score of 217.

Nelson's fine 68 equaled by two others during the third round. John Bulla of Chicago coupled a pair of 34's to give a tie at 218 with Ellsworth Vines, Monterey Park, California, and Joe Kirkwood jr., Philadelphia. Harry Bassler of Culver City, Calif., put together 35-33, bagging an eagle and two birdies on the last three holes, to get into the 220-shot bracket with W. A. Stackhouse of Seguin, Tex. Just ahead of these two was Mark Fry of Oakland, former California open champion, with 219.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

What are the three greatest sports achievements of all time? That's what the Associated Press wants to know, in a Nation-wide poll of sports writers, and would you like to know how we voted? Then don't quit now.

POVICH

On our ballot, we rated 'em (1) Babe Ruth's 60 home runs in 1927; (2) Bobby Jones' Grand Slam in 1930 when he won the American Amateur and Open and the British Amateur and Open tournaments; (3) the winning of four straight pennants by the Yankees in 1936-'37-'38-'39 and their loss of only three games of the 19 World Series games they played in those four years.

That, we think, takes care of the question proper, but there were other feats that we liked very much. Henry Armstrong's ability to win and hold the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight championships of the world simultaneously. And Joe DiMaggio's wondrous 52-game hitting streak of 1941. And Red Grange's sensational performance in Philadelphia that day when he came east with the Illinois team as the most publicized player of his era, and quickly justified it all by taking the opening kick-off back to a touchdown against Penn. It was the first of the four touchdowns of the day by Grange against a Penn team that was supposedly geared to stop the redhead.

It's tough to disregard, too, those three World Series shutouts Christy Mathewson pitched for the Giants against Connie Mack's Athletics in 1905, but when pitching feats are the topic we have our own private idea of great pitching. Walter Johnson was the hero of the episode we want to mention.

For some reason, it isn't in the record books, but Johnson holds a record that will never be approached, because pitchers of the modern day don't work like Johnson did. Once upon a time, Johnson shut out the Yankees in three consecutive games. He shut them out on Friday, shut them out again on Saturday and, with no Sunday baseball in New York, he went back to the mound and shut them out again on Monday.

You'd think that, for the man who did it, those three shut-outs would be unforgettable, but the fact is they were just three ball games as far as Johnson was concerned. When we talked to him the other day at his Germantown, Md., farm, the Big Train could not even remember the year it happened, much less the month or the scores of the games.

"I think it was about 1908, but I'm not sure about it," said Johnson. Research revealed that it was, indeed, 1908, but it didn't seem to be a matter of much importance to Walter. "I was just a big, strong kid in those days," he said. "It was only a year after I broke into baseball, and I'd pitch whenever they'd let me. They seemed to want me to pitch a lot."

Johnson remembers the experience of shutting out the Yankees three times in a row chiefly because of what happened in the fourth game of the same series. "Joe Cantillon was managing our club. After those three shutouts, I went out there on the fourth day just to limber up a bit. We only had two other pitchers with the club and they were warming up, too. Pretty soon, with the game about to start, I noticed I was the only pitcher warming up. Cantillon thought I wanted to work four games in a row and he was going to let me do it. I was dog-tired, and that is the only time in my life I ever refused to start a ball game."

It took Johnson 14 seasons to pitch his one and only no-hit game in the big leagues. That happened in 1920 when he beat the Red Sox, 1-0, at Boston. Paradoxically, it was the only year in his life he ever had a sore arm. "I got a cold in my arm that spring coming up from the South and we spent 21 nights in the same Pullman car on an exhibition trip," he explains.

Johnson must have been a pretty good pitcher along about 1913, say, because at one point he had a string of 56 consecutive shutout innings, or as we figure it, the equivalent of six straight shutout games, with a couple of innings to spare.

It was on account of Johnson, incidentally, that an American League scoring rule was changed. It was in 1912 that he equaled the record of 16 straight wins by a pitcher before he was beaten by the St. Louis Browns. In that defeat, Johnson went in as a relief pitcher with the tying and winning run on base. He gave up a hit that won the ball game, and that night Ban Johnson, president of the league, issued an order changing the scoring rules to charge an outgoing pitcher with all runs he left on base. It's the rule that's still in force, but the change came too late to permit Johnson to better the record.

Bennett Is 6-5 Favorite to Whip Latsios in Return Bout Tonight

Rematches sometimes make hot bouts and sometimes they go awfully cold, but the general belief is that tonight's 10-round return battle between Nick Latsios, the Golden Greek from Alexandria, and Charley Bennett, District colored welterweight, at Turner's Arena is promising.

What is expected to make the bout far more lively than their first encounter last month is the fact that Latsios, his 13-match winning streak having expired at the flying fists of Bennett, really is mad.

This statement came yesterday from Latsios as he wound up his training at the St. Mary's gym, Alexandria, following some calesthenics at Bolling Field, where Nick is a corporal in Uncle Sammy's Army.

Bennett 6-5 Choice

Despite his loss to Bennett, the colored scrapper is expected to be no more than a 6-5 favorite. Bennett didn't win with too much to spare the first time. He got the decision all right, but a lot of ringsiders thought it could have been a draw—or even in Nick's favor.

Bennett is no great puncher, whereas Latsios has demonstrated on several occasions that he can hit with a real sockeroo. The night he stopped Sergt. Maxie Starr at the Ball Park Latsios did a good job of punching.

To Go 10 Rounds

The last Bennett-Latsios scrap was an eight-rounder, but tonight the boys are going 10 rounds. Those two extra heats are expected to prove a help to Latsios, for the Greek didn't start driving until the latter rounds.

CHARLEY BENNETT

Eddie Kane is fighting Lee Rosan, Baltimore, in a six tonight, and wants to meet the winner for the D. C. welter title. Both Latsios and Bennett will ask the Boxing Commission today to sanction it for the title, since they claim Frankie Wills no longer can make the weight.

Stoney Lewis, Washington light-heavyweight, will fight Jimmy Bell in an eight. Bell is substituting for Mose Brown of Pittsburgh. Bell beat Mose Thom... last week. Jimmy McGriff and Charley Hoyle will open the show at 8:45.

TODAY THERE IS NOT ENOUGH NATIONAL BEER...
Not enough National Bohemian and National Premium to go around...not enough to supply the demand.
This is due to two main factors...
First, we, like all other brewers, are being rationed on our malt and our production is somewhat curtailed. But that is not what makes the shortage so acute.
There is infinitely more National Beer going out from this brewery now than there was only a few short years ago. Year by year, the demand has grown tremendously as the deep-down goodness and rare charm of this lovely beer has won the friendship of folks everywhere. What makes the shortage seem so serious today is the insistent demand for National Beer.
And that is the penalty of popularity.

Ohio State, Dartmouth Climb in Court Races

DePaul Falls From Ranks Of Unbeaten

By Jack Hand

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—DePaul was toppled from the ranks of the unbeaten by little Valparaiso, Dartmouth moved another step toward clinching a seventh straight Eastern League title and Ohio State put forth a strong Big Ten claim by swamping Indiana twice in the major events of another crowded basketball weekend.

North Carolina is perched atop the Southern Conference, Iowa State and Oklahoma straddle the Big Six lead, Texas is all alone out in front in the Southwest, UCLA, California and Washington rank at the head of the Pacific Coast class and Northwest, Purdue and Iowa remain unbeaten with the Buckeyes in the Western Conference.

Norfolk Navy Victor

Camp Grant has 13 straight, Iowa and Albright have seven in a row as the perfect record class continues to shrink. Army, under new Coach Ed Kelleher, swamped Swarthmore and Colgate in opening games to rank as one to watch.

Norfolk's Naval Training Station beat their Air Station brethren, 65 to 44, in midweek, to settle that service argument. Great Lakes continues to march along with 14 of 16, Iowa Preflight has 11 out of 12 and Columbia's surprising Midshipmen have the scalp of NYU, 46 to 43.

St. Mary's Preflight and Olathe Naval Airmen also are top notchers.

Among the independents Oklahoma Aggies have won 13 of 14, Kentucky 10 of 11 and St. John's of Brooklyn 8 of 9. Other high rankers are Muhlenberg, with 10 wins in 11 starts, Gonaga, Temple and Western Michigan.

DePaul's upset by Valparaiso, a small Indiana University with a normal registry of 520 students, ranks as one of the shockers of the campaign. The towering Crusaders helped themselves to a substantial gain in national prestige by shackling big George Mikan for a 65-to-57 triumph.

Pitt Upset a Surprise

Surprise of the week was the size of Penn State's 15-to-12 edge over Pittsburgh in a throwback to the early days of the sport. Only six field goals were scored, three on each side, as Pitt froze the ball and refused to pass into State's zone defense.

St. John's took Temple in Philadelphia, 36-32, in the East's best game with 11,666 watching the double-header, in the other half of which Penn was knocked off by St. Joseph's, 48-39. Canisius lost its second of the year, bowing to City College, 37-36, while Rochester ran its record to six and one by drubbing West Virginia, 49-36.

Dartmouth Beats Tigers

Aud Brindley scored 22 points as Dartmouth made it five straight in the Eastern League, trimming Princeton, 54-31. The Indians can clinch the flag by beating Penn at Hanover, N. H., Saturday.

Don Grate with 48 points in two games against Indiana was the shining light for Ohio State, now a Big Ten threat. Wisconsin took Michigan twice, the second time, 42-31, before a record Saturday turnout of 10,500. Purdue made it four in a row in the conference by stopping Minnesota twice and Chicago stretched its league losing streak to 43 by bowing to Northwestern, 77-20 and Illinois 69-32.

Two-Man-Team Match on Mat Card

The popular two-man team match competition will be continued at Turner's Arena again on Wednesday night's wrestling show featuring Don Evans, the Pacific Coast flash, and Maurice Chappelle, the Flying Frenchman, in a rematch.

Dr. John Bonika will team with Jack Wentworth, a promising youngster from St. Louis, against Dick Bishop of Iowa and Mike DeMetra of New York. It will be two out of three falls.

Perrusos Cafe and FBI basketball teams, current leaders in the Heurich League, both won their games at Heurich gym yesterday, the former by a 2-point margin over Jacobson Florist, 54-52, and G-Men easily over the Marine quint, 80-51. United Typewriter gained ground somewhat, scoring over Camp Springs, 45-28.

In the Heurich Girls' League, United Typewriter defeated the FBI girls, 46-28.

Six Games on Interhigh Slate During Biggest Week of Series

By Tom Moore McBride

The District interhigh basketball season will dribble down the court into its third week tomorrow when unbeaten Tech meets Eastern and Western meets Anacostia in an afternoon double-header at Eastern gym at 4 p. m. Six interhigh games are on the week's schedule.

Western, by virtue of Anacostia's two defeats in two starts, should be hands down favorite to scalp the Indians. What's more, Western was a far better ball club when it met and defeated Roosevelt Saturday night than it was in losing to Tech in the opener of the series. The additional week of experience under its belt made a world of difference in the matter of polish.

The Tech-Eastern game looks like a toss-up, despite the Eastside team's loss to Coolidge last Friday, for Eastern has a smoothly functioning team that can't be lowrated because of a defeat by the team which undoubtedly will prove the most powerful in the series.

Tech will get another workout Friday when it meets Wilson, the team which lost to Eastern by one point two weeks ago, but was hard-pressed to maintain a winning margin over Central last Saturday. Eastern will have another go, too, in the other half of the Tech gym double-header, meeting Anacostia at 7:30 p. m.

Roosevelt, which made a rather poor showing against Western in its last outing, will have a crack at top-notcher Coolidge in the opener Saturday, and Central will play Western in the nightcap.

Werner Wins Cup Race

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Jan. 16 (AP).—Dick Werner of Paterson, N. J., won the featured 3-mile Saratoga Cup race for the third time today, but had to share the Eastern States Speed Skating championships with Joe Bree of New York. Each scored 80 points.

Minutes matter more in war

When Long Distance lines are crowded the operator will say

"PLEASE LIMIT YOUR CALL TO 5 MINUTES"

There's a good reason for that. • It's to help everybody get better service. • And you can say a lot in five minutes. Maybe you can hold that next Long Distance call to three minutes. • That would be even better.

A FEW OF THE MANY WHO HAVE TRAVELLED BY AIR OVERSEAS DURING THIS WAR

TO WORK TOGETHER
PEOPLE FIRST MUST GET TOGETHER

The President of the United States to Africa, by air!

The Secretary of State to Russia, by air!

Numerous other Americans and leaders of the United Nations, on their world-wide war missions, are criss-crossing the world by air.

They have to go to places quickly in order to do things quickly!

It's Getting Commonplace

Not only do transport planes quickly bridge the Atlantic and Pacific for thousands of persons, but also for tons and tons of products necessary to win this war. The crews of the cargo and passenger planes of the Army's Air Transport Command and the Naval Air Transport Service will go down in history for the vital roles they are playing in today's world drama.

Yes, international war travellers do use air as nonchalantly as we at home hail a taxi.

Due to air transportation the old song title "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway" now has universal significance.

Why Not? Air Is Everywhere

The importance of why one travels changes with the times. Now it's for military, political and morale reasons.

Tomorrow, it will be for all manner of business, professional and recreational reasons. Then, the travel missions of even more people, both domestic and international, will acquire first rank in importance.

American Airlines Will Grow

Peacetime travellers too will demand the time saving, easy, comfortable air-way to go places and do things. Our job is to grow in order to enable more people, in all lines of business, to get together quicker so that they may work together more effectively.

It's Inevitable

Large as is the volume of today's wartime air travel it is only a hint of the inevitable postwar volume. Even if we desired to, we could not prevent its growth, any more than the steamship, the train and the motor car were prevented.

American Airlines, being the greatest national airline and a great international airline, is preparing for future expansion—because, air transportation is still NEW for millions of people.

White House May Enter Arlington Farms Fight

It now appears that President Roosevelt will be asked to take a hand in the fight over Arlington Farms. It is known that a White House secretary has asked for a report on the action of National Housing of approving space at the farm for an additional 2000 WAVES. The big Government girl dormitories were built for civilian girls, and rooms for hundreds of them will have to be canceled if the Navy deal goes through. War and Treasury Department and FBI officials are among those who have protested vigorously against the move. Though it okayed the plan for Navy to take over two more residence halls, Civil Service officials yesterday insisted that (1) sufficient space be maintained to take care of all new girls temporarily until they can be placed in private homes and (2) that the War Housing Center be kept open on a 24-hour schedule to look after new arrivals who had reservations at the farm.

FBI EFFICIENCY: A New Yorker registered twice for the draft and falsified his age. He was arrested but refused to admit the duplicate registration. Later, he was arrested a second time and confessed. His explanation was that he was interested in the way the FBI took specimens of his handwriting for identification and he, as a taxpayer, wanted to see how efficiently the G-Men operated. He must have been satisfied. His handwriting was submitted to the laboratory here where positive identification was made.

United Nations Relief Rehabilitation headquarters will be set up in the Dupont Circle Apartment Building. Bob Parker, information chief of UNRRA, has quit. . . . O. D. Hollenbeck, chief of veterans' replacement at War Manpower, was a member of Walter Camp's All-American football team in 1910. He played at Colgate. . . . C. Russell Uphoff has replaced Maj. J. C. Shover as personnel director of War's Surgeon General's Office. . . . Grover Hill, the heavyweight and hard-working assistant War Foods administrator, is jokingly referred to as the soft underbelly of War Foods. . . .

Civil Service plans to build up its staff temporarily to clean out the backlog of retirement refund claims. It gets an average of 2500 claims daily, but only 1000 are settled. The claims come mainly from former employes who served less than five years and who can't benefit from the system unless they reenter Federal service. For a time it was believed it would be necessary to move the refund work to another city because of the lack of space and personnel here. Now, however, it's planned to move the retirement division to a larger building and employes will be taken off other work and reassigned to the retirement division within the commission.

The Fourth War Bond drive starts today in Federal agencies and Guy G. Chase of Commodity Credit has devised a swell plan to keep up the interest of employes. Chase is war bond chairman and he has set himself up as commander of a fleet of PT boats. A PT boat is assigned to each office and it's listed on a big chart for all employes to see. The PT boats will leave San Francisco today and their schedule is Pearl Harbor, Truk and, finally, Tokyo on February 28. Their cargo will be war bonds. Commander Chase will send out daily communiques on the progress of the fleet. Naturally, each office wants to be the first to get its ship to Tokyo. To get it there the employes must subscribe 35 per cent of their January salary, payable this and next month.

LeRoy Westbury has been elected president of AFGE's U. S. Special Police Association lodge for the fifth consecutive term. Elected with him were James Wright, E. W. O'Hare, and Clayton Bacher. . . . Navy is looking for classification trainees. Persons selected will be trained here for six weeks and then sent to field stations both in the East and West Coasts. Applicants must be college graduates, between 25 and 35. People who have had courses in business or public administration are preferred. Entrance salary is $2000 plus overtime. For further information call Miss Taylor, Republic 1400, Extension 5298.

The Buzzard, employe publication of Coast and Geodetic Survey, takes the hide off the Commerce cafeteria. "Never has such a colossal farce been pawned off on any group as we have here with the department cafeteria," the publication says. "The selection of menu and the quality of food has steadily declined. Sanitary conditions are such that they certainly would not be permitted in a commercial restaurant. Plates and eating utensils more often than not have the remains of a previous lunch still clinging to them. Often the pile of rejected forks and spoons is as large as the available supply in the trays . . . given the same conditions of rent, space, etc., a commercial restaurant would realize a fortune in this setup." The editors of the Buzzard say they have received so many complaints that they will consider the circulation of a petition to boycott the cafeteria unless conditions improve. The charges are serious and somtheing must be done about them.

500 Women Vow to Push Soldier Vote

Five hundred women attending the eighteenth Women's Patriotic Conference at the Statler Hotel adopted a resolution yesterday morning at the closing session calling upon the members of the 35 organizations represented to insist in their respective States that measures be taken to assure soldiers the right to vote.

The resolution also specified that in taking steps to assure voting the women give special precautions to see that there will be no question as to the legality of the ballots.

Another resolution was adopted demanding legislation that may be needed and the enforcement of existing laws prohibiting strikes in defense industries and in every part of the war effort "to give particularly unchallenged proof of the support of the Nation to the men and women in our armed services."

Mrs. Lawrence Smith of Racine, Wis., chairman of the conference, presided, and speakers included J. Norman Lodge, Associated Press corespondent; Representative Keefe (Republican) of Wisconsin, and Comdr. J. L. Collis of the United States Navy.

Pinza's Songs Please Large Audience

By Ray C. B. Brown

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Ezio Pinza in a song recital Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall. Accompanist: Gibner King. Program of operatic arias by Handel, Gagliano and Verdi; songs by Leone Sinigaglia, Reynaldo Hahn, Jean Paul Martini, Augusta Holmes, Charles Griffes, Edward Harris, John Carpenter, Misha Levitzki, Bruno Huhn, Riccardo Zandonai, Paolo Tosti and Gabriele Sibella.

Constitution Hall held a large audience yesterday afternoon for the song recital by Ezio Pinza, whose admirable artistry aroused no small amount of enthusiasm. It was a most enjoyable occasion for those who appreciate the art of singing, for the Metropolitan basso is one of its superior exponents. His voice has a power of dramatic oratory coupled with lyric tenderness, and his interpretations reveal an instinct for emotional shadings. Every item on his program, whether new or old, was engrossing because of his subtleties in reading and his characterization of moods, and he was fortunate in having an excellent accompanist, Gibner King.

His program was a model for singers who wish to explore lyric literature and at the same time please their listeners with some songs they already know. Of his four operatic arias, two were familiar: "Si, tra i ceppi" from Handel's "Bernice" and "Ill lacerto spirito" from Verdi's "Simon Boccanegro"; while the others were novelties. I do not recall having heard before the plaintive "Cara sposa" from Handel's "Rinaldo" or the lovely "Dormi, amore" from Marco da Gagliano's "La Flora," one of the earliest operas, which dates from 1628.

The same balance was observed in his French group in which Martini's "Plaisir d'amour" and Augusta Holmes' "Au pays" were offset by Raynaldo Hann's "Trois jours de vendage" and Alfred Bruneau's "L'heureux vagabond." As an encore he gave a splendid reading of Ange Flegiers "Le Cor."

One of the finest songs in the list opened his English group, "The Lament of Ian the Proud," by Charles Griffes, and its companions were "Winter" by Edward Harris, "To One Unnown" by John Alden Carpenter, "'Do You Remember" by Misha Levitzki and "Cato's Advice" by Brun Huhn. Ricardo Zondonai's "I due tarli" was a novelty in his Italian group, which included Tosti's "La Serenade" and Sibella's "Non ho parole."

At the Pan American Union yesterday afternoon, Blanca Renard, the Chilean pianist favorably known in Washington, where she has resided for some time, gave a recital for a goodly audience in the Hall of the Americas. Her playing has technical facility and the warmth of temperamental communication. Her program consists largely of familiar pieces by Granados, Albeniz, Falla, Ravel and Lecuona, but there were three numbers from South America that had the charm of strangeness. She played two of the 12 poetic and melancholy "Tonadas" by Humberto Allende, and Soro's "Allegro Appassionata."

The limited capacity of Phillips Memorial Gallery was taxed yesterday afternoon, when the Russian-American composer, Nikolai Nabokov, lectured on "The Influence of Bach on Contemporary Composers." His remarks covered a larger field than the title indicated, for he discussed melodic polyphony of the Renaissance, with Palestrina as example, and seventeenth century monophony with reference to Monteverde.

Stravinski and Hindemith were the living composers whom he choose as representative of a movement back to the procedure of Bach. This return he attributed partly to a nostalgia for a vanished reasonableness in the arts and partly to a desire for order and unity in a world that has become complex beyond our understanding.

Brilliant pianistic virtuosity was on exhibition last evening in the east garden court of the National Gallery of Art, where Claudio Arrau, distinguished Chilean artist, was presented in a recital that drew an overflowing audience. His program was of the conservatory type in that contained music in which students are well versed, if one excepts "Alma Brasileira" by Heitor Villa-Lobos and "El Pelele" by Granados.

Mozart's D major Rondo and Beethoven's "Les Adieux" Sonata in E flat major formed the first group, and the second contained Chopin's A flat major Ballade and E. major Scherzo, and two pieces by Liszt, "Jeux d'eau a la Villla Este" and the "Mephisto" waltz. Ravel's "Ondine" and Debussy's "Fireworks" completed the list.

Soldiers Find Beds, Bath, Breakfast at Churches Here

By Robert Tate Allan

This reporter slept in church over the weekend. But this sermon was not responsible.

Eager to get a bed's-eye view of churches' overnight lodging for servicemen, I bunked in All Souls' Unitarian Service Center, 15th and Harvard sts., in the wee sma' hours of the Sabbath. After that experience, I am ready to give three rousing cheers for what church folk on the home front are doing for the men.

About midnight, Sailor Harry Lewis of Quantico, shook the snow off his pea-jacket and signed the registration book. Soap and towel in hand, he started down the hallway toward his cot in the gymnasium in the church basement. Trailing behind was a wet, tan mongrel that had become attached to him earlier in the evening.

Lewis turned in around 1 a. m. The fugitive from the K-9 corps curled up at the foot of his cot. When Uptin Laybarger, the lodging supervisor, came to call some of the lads at 7:30 a. m., it was found the pup had been doing alright for himself—he was snuggled up in bed beside Lewis.

About 11 p. m. Saturday night, a Yorkshire accent floated down the steps of Pierce Hall. The English had arrived, in the person of Richard Dodsworth and James Dean, air mechanics of the Royal Navy, stationed at Norfolk.

Lads from every branch of the service and every State in the Union, and several from foreign lands, have bunked at All Souls' Church, which in 1943, accommodated 3243 servicemen. A total of 300 men find week-end lodging at All Souls', St. Margaret's Episcopal, Covenant-First Presbyterian, Concordia Evangelical Lutheran, Christ Episcopal (Georgetown) and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The projects are conducted with the aid of the War Hospitality Committee, Civilian War Services.

Most of the lads came to All Souls' Saturday from midnight on Saturday, after "dates" downtown. They found that not a detail for their comfort had been overlooked. Razors, shaving coap and other equipment were available. Near the "gym" they found showers, rest rooms, shoeshine boxes, ironing board, and even needles and thread to sew on buttons. And they had their pick of mystery tales on the table near the registration desk.

Most of the lads at All Souls' center are sent from the USO Center at 9th and Pennsylvania ave. nw. They pay 50 cents for lodging and incidentals. Breakfast, at 25 cents, is optional.

Lybarger, a draftsman with the British Supply Commission, keeps everything running with smooth efficiency at the All Souls' center, assisted by other men and women of the church.

Women of Central Kitchen No. 1, Red Cross Unit, prepared and served the breakfast yesterday to more than 100 men, including some who came over after having stayed overnight at the Mormon Church's service center across the street. The menu included fruit juice, coffee, milk, bacon and eggs and hot rolls. The women in charge were Mrs. C. I. Denison, Miss Virginia Gunn, Miss Louise Bridgman, Mrs. M. E. Mack, Miss Edith Griffith, Miss Josephine Simon and Mrs. M. F. Kahn.

When the lads request it, a letter is sent from the church to their relatives, describing the project at All Souls. And many of the servicemen wander off alone to the church library and write—

"Dear Mom . . ."

Msgr. Sheen Lays World Chaos To Repudiation of Moral Law

The Right Rev. Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen yesterday blamed "repudiation of the moral law" for the present world chaos.

"The moral law has been repudiated in a wholesale fashion by totalitarian systems and in a retail fashion by some American jurists and the intelligentsia, and by the intelligentsia I mean those who have become educated beyond their intelligence," he said.

Msgr. Sheen, Catholic University theologian and radio speaker, was heard over NBC on the Catholic Hour, sponsored by the National Council of Catholic Men. His theme was "The Natural Law of God," third in a series of talks on the general theme of "One Lord, One World."

"This basic moral law of reason, which is a participation of each of us in the eternal reason of God, is the one priciple upon which we can and should unite."

"It makes no difference if one be a Jew, a Protestant or a Catholic; a Hottentot, a Mohammedan, or a Hindu; a German of a Japanese. For as Gladstone wrote, in the last century:

"'The moral law is coeval with mankind and dictated by God, Himself, and is of course superior in obligation to any other. It is binding all over the globe in all countries and at all times; no human laws are of any validity, if contrary to this.'"

Court Decision On McNabb Test Review Due Today

The United States Supreme Court is expected to announce today whether it will review the James P. Mitchell "society burglar" case in the first test of the McNabb decision restricting the use of evidence in criminal cases where the defendants are not arraigned promptly.

The Justice Department contends the McNabb decision needs clarification. It decrees that alleged criminals must be brought before a magistrate without delay and any evidence obtained in the interim is not allowable in a trial.

James J. Laughlin, attorney for Mitchell, whose two convictions on burglaries of socialites' houses here were reversed under the McNabb ruling, has opposed the court review of the case.

Spiritual Changes in Europe Seen

The Rev. Stewart W. Herman, jr., pastor of the American Church in Berlin during Hitler's rise to power, said yesterday at Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, that peoples of war-torn Europe are beginning to realize that a world-wide Christian faith is the only hope for a permanent peace.

Mr. Herman, who underwent a number of bombings from 1939 until 1941, is here on a confidential mission.

He said news coming from Germany and Russia in 1943 indicated "profound spiritual changes, not in the regimes, perhaps, but in the common people, who have been far harder hit by this war than we shall ever be."

"Stalin, for his part, recognized the orthodox church after 20 years of bitter suppression, and Himmler, chief of the Nazi Elite Guard, appears to have urged his men to attend Christian services," said the speaker.

"I do not put these two men in the same class except insofar as they—and thousands of other indifferent and antagnoistic Europeans—have been constrained to discover unsuspecting strength and value in the Christian faith."

Mr. Herman authored the book, "It's Your Souls We Want," which tells the inside story of the Nazi efforts to destroy the Christian Church.

Potomac Lore Aids Piloting Of Big Ship

CAPTAIN HARRY E. SLYE

Piloting the 10,000-ton Liberty ship, SS American Mariner, on the last lap of its three-day ocean journey into Municipal Fish Wharf here was "like driving along a country road you've known all your life" for Capt. Harry E. Slye of Washington.

Captain Slye, relaxing at his home, 423 Oglethorpe st. nw., last night after his first sea-going jaunt in years, explained that he relied not so much on official charts for his course as his 30 years' experience skippering in Chesapeake Bay and the Potomac. He was well acquainted with the intricacies of the treacherous Potomac so that even the dredged cuts of the channel, some 15 miles of them all told, presented little difficulty.

At those points, there was only 6 inches to a foot of water between the muddy floor of the Potomac and the Liberty ship, brought here for public inspection during the Fourth War Loan drive, but Capt. Slye brought his boat in with ease. This, despite the fact that the vessel was more than twice the size of any ship he'd ever piloted.

The Mariner, which would normally require two tugboats to dock her, came in without benefit of any, Captain Slye pointed out proudly.

Quartered on the ship, in addition to the crew and an entourage of reporters, were more than 250 Merchant Marine trainees. It made for a "pretty friendly" trip, according to Captain Slye, who went to sea when he was 17. His father was also a sea captain.

Besides feeling it an honor to bring in the biggest boat to anchor in the Potomac, Captain Slye said he was proud to have sailed the same type of ship that his son, Harry, jr., a cadet midshipman in the Merchant Marine, is training on in the Pacific. He was writing his experiences to the youth last night.

Lieut. Wight's Hearing

Virginia Wight on alleged charges of insubordination, wearing slacks and sweaters, borrowing money, having supper in her room and leaving the Fort Myer post without permission is set for 9:30 a. m. tomorrow before an Army Reclassification Board in the Pentagon Building.

The charges have not yet been officially disclosed by the Army James J. Laughlin, attorney for the WAC, has charged prejudice on the part of her superior officers in the attempt to reclassify or otherwise penalize her.

Dog of Flier Killed in Pacific Returns to D.C. With Decoration

After an eventful flight, which included an unexpected side trip to New York due to weather conditions, Andrew Jackson Rebel, warwise dog, arrived here yesterday from the South Pacific. He is shown with Miss Selma Katz, sister of his lost master, with whom he will make his home

Andrew Jackson Rebel, plucky Boston terrier who flew on 20 bombing missions in the South Pacific before his master, Staff Sergt. Raymond Katz, 24, was killed in action, arrived in Washington yesterday to live with his lost owner's family at 4918 9th st. nw.

Rebel, who left the United States last April tucked in the pocket of Sergt. Katz of the Army Air Forces, returned by plane from the Pacific area but ran into difficulties when he was practically home.

The United Airlines plane on which he was riding from Chicago was unable to land here Saturday because of weather conditions, so Rebel made an unexpected flight on to New York. There he was placed on a train which arrived here at 2 a. m. yesterday.

Dressed in a bright blue blanket marked Fifth Air Force, New Guinea, Andrew Jackson Rebel was welcomed by Mrs. Milton Katz, mother of the machine gunner. The family was overjoyed to receive the mascot, which had been constantly with their son except on the last flight, November 11, from which he failed to return.

Miss Selma Katz, 20, the flier's sister, brought Rebel to United Airlines offices yesterday morning by way of "completing" his trip via air. Though the terrier had been decorated for 10,000 flying hours and had seen considerable combat duty, he blinked at photographers' flash bulbs and made it plain that he preferred his rugged life in airplanes.

"My brother mentioned Rebel in every letter," Miss Katz said. "He bought him in California just before he was shipped overseas. All the men in his crew loved the puppy. They wanted Rebel sent back to mother. We don't know why he didn't go on that last flight."

Rebel has a new assignment now—aiding in the sale of war bonds. Miss Katz will lend him to the interdepartmental war savings bond committee to be shown in Government agencies in connection with the Fourth War Loan campaign. His first appearance will be at 4:30 p. m. today at the Maritime Commission Bond meeting in the Commerce auditorium.

Trip Awaits Top Scouts in Paper Drive

As bonuses for outstanding service to the paper salvage drive, a Boy Scout or Cub from each of the five Washington area troops collecting the largest amount of waste paper salvage this month will be offered a train trip to a paper mill in York, Pa., with full expense paid by The Washington Post, it was announced yesterday.

The Post is sponsoring the tour in connection with the Boy Scout paper salvage program, which was launched over a month ago in cooperation with the District of Columbia Salvage Committee.

Collections to Count

Selection of the top-collecting troops will be made by the salvage committee on the basis of official collection figures filed with them by troops or packs registered in the paper campaign. The five leading troops will make their own selections of a scout or cub to represent them on the prize trip.

According to plans made public by The Post yesterday, the five scouts chosen for the honor will make the inspection trip on Saturday, February 5, to see first-hand what becomes of the paper they have accumulated and collected for the war effort.

To Visit York Mill

Scouters will leave Washington at 8:15 a. m. in parlor cars, accompanied by Linn C. Drake, scout executive, or his representative, a representative of The Post and a representative of the D. C. Salvage Committee.

They are scheduled to arrive in York, Pa., at 10:41 a. m. and will be greeted by Henry Schmidt, president of the Schmidt & Alt Paper Co., one of the largest mills in the East, who will conduct the boys on a personal tour of inspection. Scout Executive Ray E. Zoner and a scout delegation from the York-Adams Council will also welcome the scouts on arrival.

Luncheon Included

The boys will be able to see collected waste paper converted into containers and boxboard for use in the war effort at the Schmidt & Alt mill. Luncheon also will be included in the prize trip.

In the afternoon, the youngsters will be conducted on inspection trips of several war plants in York, with emphasis on the heavy wartime needs for waste paper.

The Scouts will leave York at 6:02 p. m. and should return to Washington by 8:40 p. m.

The oustanding troops, eligible for these incentive awards for "meritorious and outstanding service to the Boy Scout paper salvage program," will be selected by the District of Columbia Salvage Committee on Monday, January 31, after the month's collection totals have been tabulated.

Texans Gather To Honor Head Of War Council

Deep in the heart of a Texas breakfast were the guests—mostly Texans, as you might well guess—of Maj. Burris C. Jackson of the Army, of Washington, but mostly of Hillsboro, Tex., when he entertained yesterday morning at the Continental Hotel. The occasion for the meal of savory country sausage and other trimmings, designed to bring on Texas nostalgia, was the birthday anniversary of William R. Boyd, jr., chairman of the Petroleum Industry War Council, who is, during time off from his war job, with the American Petroleum Institute of New York.

Longtime friends are Major Jackson and Mr. Boyd, who last week celebrated his birthday anniversary. Major Jackson is host at these breakfasts every two months or so, usually honoring someone who has done an outstanding job in the war effort. So yesterday's breakfast honored Mr. Boyd on two counts.

Speeches ran in the humorous vein with Bascom Timmons, newspaper man, exposing his virtues and explaining to the gathered group why he should be made vice president in preference to Mr. Boyd. Also speaking was Senator Tom Connally, and leading a song fest was Rep. Fritz Lanham. About 50 guests were present, among whom were the Speaker, Sam Rayburn, the Tom Connallys, Rep. Ewing Thomason, chairman of the Texas congressional delegation, and Mrs. Thomason. Mr. and Mrs. Joe Montague, Gen. and Mrs. Walter Pyron, Marvin Jones and Col. and Mrs. C. C. Garner were among other guests.

Ambassador Hears First Performance Of New Anthem

The Soviet Ambassador, Andrei A. Gromyko, who went to Philadelphia Friday to hear the new Russian national anthem, "Hymn of the Soviet Union," in its first American performance, the Philadelphia Orchestra playing, has returned to the Embassy.

The 37-year-old Ambassador, on his first visit to Philadelphia, spoke during an intermission of the afternoon concert at the Academy of Music for a transcription, supervised by the Office of War Information, which will ship the recorded concert program to Russia for a broadcast. With the Ambassador was his wife and Vladimir Bazykin, first secretary of the Embassy, and Mrs. Bazykin, all guests of Eugene Ormandy.

Newest Group of WRENS Arrives From Argentina

By Peggy Preston

Twelve pretty senoritas from the Argentine have lately joined the city's corps of uniformed women.

Their story is a novel one, a chapter in the saga of the Brittsh Commonwealth of Nations. While they speak easily in the soft tongue of the southern republic in which they were born, their names are British and they wear the navy blues of the WRENS. And they are, one and all, subjects of His Majesty the King.

Born of British parents in Buenos Aires, the girls came to Washington about a month ago to serve in the British Admiralty Office here. Prior to their arrival several groups of Englishwomen, recruited in the British-owned islands of the Caribbean area, had joined the local corps of ATS in the Capital. But the dozen young women from Argentina are the first from Latin America to serve in the Washington office of the WRENS.

Despaired of Reaching Here

Neither were these girls recruited. Their coming was their own idea and one which required considerable effort on their part in order to make it come true. Transportation was a problem, and the girls admit that in the months before their departure they frequently gave up hope of ever reaching Washington.

Once arrived, they have settled into their new jobs with more than the usual interest.

Washington seems quite near to London to them, and their opportunity to work with British officials is, they claim, the greatest stroke of good fortune.

The girls have friends in both British and Argentine circles in Washington. Last Sunday, wearing their trim new uniforms, they had tea with the Military Attache at the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Brunet. It was their first real "Argentine tea" since their departure from Buenos Aires, and they lingered long over the tea cups.

All Have British Names

"I've missed the tea hour most of all," one of the girls explained. And they all chimed in to explain that tea time in Argentina is the most important hour of the day, an interlude in the day's activities that is almost always spent at home with family or friends.

At the Brunet home on Sunday they tasted the rich pastries and hot sandwiches that are part and parcel of the high teas served in the Argentine.

This most-recently arrived contingent of WRENS includes Miss Valerie Anson Mey, Miss Nora Evans, Miss Stella Simons, Miss Magdelina Grand, Miss Brenda Strong, the Misses Irene and Phyllis Cartwright, Miss Jean Gibson, Miss Patricia Fitzherbert, Miss Mary Miles, Miss Hilda Hughes and Miss Forna Mulhall.

Very British, these names, and very British indeed are these Argentine-born WRENS. And this despite the fact that several are members of the second or third generation in their families to be born in the Latin-American republic.

Argentine Doctors Come for Study

Dr. Roberto Lopez, physician of Argentina, who is being sent to the United States by his firm, the West India Co., is due in Miami from Buenos Aires on Thursday. He will be accompanied by Senor Alberto Peckham.

Dr. German Hugo Dickman, Argentine neurologist, who has been studying at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore since the middle of December, expects to leave the United States this week to return to Buenos Aires.

Dr. Luis LeLoir, Argentine physician, has arrived in this country, where he will study for several months.

Wartime Guest List Sparkles With Variety

Where else but here—Washington in wartime—will you find the top names in almost any profession you can name, the leaders of countries, diplomats, legislators, executives? And where else are you likely to find a mixed group of them any Sunday night, but the lovely home of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, whose guest lists have increased in sparkle while variety in food rations has waned?

Last night's contingent included the Greek Ambassador and Mme. Diamantopoulos, the Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. Loudon, the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Wickard; judicial and legislative departments mingled in the simple wartime setting of Mrs. McLean's party with Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Judge and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Senator and Mrs. Truman, Senator and Mrs. O'Mahoney, Senator and Mrs. Taft, Senator Green, Senator Guffey, Senator Edwin Johnson, Senator Ashhurst, Senator Barkley and his daughter, Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 2d, Representative Charles Dewey, Representative and Mrs. Martin Dies, and Representative Edith Nourse Rogers.

Other faces familiar in the Capital appeared, including Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Russell Maxwell, Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land, Capt. Michael Bartlett, Sir Ronald Campbell, the Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. William Clayton, Clarence Hewes, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Henderson, the editor of American Mercury and Mrs. William B. Huie, Charles Michelson, Fernando de Medeiras from down Brazil way, Mrs. Warren Robbins, Lothrop Stoddard and his recent bride, Sir Wilmot and Lady Lewis, Herbert May and Ruth Mitchell.

Former Nurse's Aide, Who Returned From Hospital With Newborn Baby to Household Crippled by Flu, Sees Urgent Need of Volunteer Home Nursing Help

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Since coming to Washington last July, I have been an interested reader of your column, and have noticed how helpful you are in the line of social service work. In past years, I was an ardent volunteer worker in that field. I am a member of the Junior League and was a Red Cross Nurse's Aide for four years. However, I now have a child nearly three; and another was born five weeks ago, so I have not been able to undertake any work recently.

When I was discharged from the hospital after the birth of my second child, I returned to a household crippled by influenza. My doctor had forbidden me to climb stairs; and formula-making presented an almost insurmountable problem. Due to the influenza epidemic, it was impossible to secure nursing help. Fortunately, I had friends who volunteered to come and make the formula; but without them, I don't know what I would have done.

All of this leads up to the suggestion that it might be an excellent idea to form an Auxiliary Visiting Nurse Service,—or "Home Service Nurse's Aides,"—to assist those who are unable to secure nursing help, and cannot, for physical reasons, fend for themselves. These aides could be trained volunteers, capable of coming into a home and giving bed baths, changing linens, making formulas, bathing a baby, or a number of other home-nursing aids. If you should think my idea praiseworthy, I would appreciate your calling it to the attention of any organization which would be willing to undertake it. Very truly yours,

MARGARET H.

A. W. V. S. Has Plans For Project Under Way

DEAR MARGARET H.: Your idea is so praiseworthy, in my opinion, that I immediately passed it along to the American Women's Voluntary Services. Whereupon I discovered, in talking with Mrs. G. Howland Chase, vice president of the local A. W. V. S., who is also president of the Instructive Visiting Nurses Society of the District, that a project exactly corresponding to your idea is already "in the planning stage," under A. W. V. S. auspices.

In fact, the plans are now sufficiently well incubated, — after careful preliminary cooperative consultation with various other "health service" organizations in the community,—that the A. W. V. S. expects to be able to launch this special home-helper service within another month. The first step was to determine the extent-of-need of such a service,—i.e., whether family emergencies of the type you describe were being or could be met by existing community services; or whether an additional volunteer service had a real contribution to make in that field. The second step was to integrate the proposed volunteer-nursing project into the existing pattern of community health-care services. And the third step, now about to be taken, is to assemble volunteers to do the job.

'An Asset for Job I. Time to Give'

TWO CLASSIFICATIONS of volunteers are wanted,—what we might call the "student" and "graduate" varieties. In other words, women with special training or practical experience in nursing are wanted by the A. W. V. S. to conduct courses of instruction for untrained volunteers. And the major qualification of the volunteer home-helper who applies for training is,—says Mrs. Chase,—"Time to give!" Although volunteers, when ready to go into the field, will not be assigned rigid schedules of hours-of-service, it is now tentatively thought that a home-helper, to be a really effective aid in emergency, should be prepared to give five hours a day, say from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m., on a week's shift,—with an in-between recess of one, two or three weeks, depending upon the weight of her other responsibilities.

Volunteers should register in person, at the A. W. V. S. headquarters in the Church of the Pilgrims, at 1520 22d st. nw. The registration desk is open from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. Mondays through Fridays. Mrs. Daniel Long is head of the A. W. V. S. Training School,—if volunteer nursing instructors should wish to talk with her before signing up.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

As I read the thousands of letters I get from mothers yearly, I am impressed with the fact that it is often the small, not the enormous mistakes a parent makes, which have unhappy results.

One catches one's gross errors because results are so dramatic. But, when a mother offers a large glass of orange juice and two teaspoons of cod-liver oil to her daughter who has just wakened from sleep, she may not see that it is this trivial practice which may result in the child's refusal, a half-hour later, to eat the "nice bowl of cereal" she serves her.

Results in Loss of Appetite

Orange juice alone might have no such influence on the appetite. But oil leaves the stomach slowly. While it is digesting there is a sense of fullness and satisfaction which would make more food seem distasteful.

To give the warm cereal first in the morning and transfer the dosages of orange juice and oil to midway between the morning and noon meals is a very small change, but it might have tremendous results.

The habit of giving a bottle of milk between regular meals, "because the baby takes it then more willingly," seems to result in a loss of appetite which is always of great concern (often mystification) to the parent. She can't understand why the baby is never hungry for her meals.

Remember, Milk Is Food

It shouldn't be such a mystery. Milk is food.

When a child eats three times a day and takes three bottles of milk (maybe four) between meals, there is no opportunity for an appetite to develop. The stomach is always busy digesting either the meal or the milk feeding.

Perhaps less milk might be taken after the solid food but then, perhaps, with all this food not so much milk is needed. Or, maybe too much solid food is being given at a meal.

Mothers often tell me they feed a child 6 to 8 tablespoons of cereal or a half or a whole cup. How could a child drink any milk after that?

Better two to four tablespoons and the bottle of milk, all consumed at the same meal, with plenty of time between meals to work up a good appetite for the next one.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Every Hair in Place

SURVEYING her nails as she dressed, she wondered if she were letting herself slip. At first she had thought it was due to lack of calcium. Now she knew it was from washing pots, scraping carrots, oiling floors, scrubbing bathrooms. Well, there was nothing she could do about that, except to keep her hands inconspicuous and wear a lighter shade of polish.

It wasn't only the nails though, she reminded herself, as she struggled with her hair. Why didn't she get a wave set yesterday instead of thinking she could go over until next week! Still—when on earth in yesterday's weary, crowded day could she have gotten it in? Then there was her face. It didn't have that fresh, clean, rested look Elaine Whiffle's always had. A facial might have cleared up that dinginess, smoothed away those tired lines. Yet when had she had time for a facial? Or money either, for that matter—with the Christmas bills, and the income tax and the war bonds.

As she hurriedly dressed, she kept seeing Elaine Whiffle—cool, leisurely, perfectly groomed and poised. No matter what Elaine wore, even if it were one of last season's little numbers, she would convey that air of perfection—the smooth, clean, alive skin, with just the right amount of make-up perfectly applied; the sleek upswept coiffure with every hair in place; the soft, flawless hands with their long, dark red nails and large, exotic rings; the compact, trained-down figure showing not a bulge under the skimpy L-85 clothes; the unperturbed, confident air of the woman who knows that everything about her is exactly right.

ALL THE WAY there she kept asking herself if she lacked character. Those things were matters of character and even in wartime women ought to look the best they could and keep up morale. That was what everybody said. But she was always so busy and so tired . . . Probably she wasn't a good manager.

In the hall she ran on to Bett Jeepers. "I'm keeping on my gloves," explained Bett, "Dishpan hands!" Entering the room, she found the hostess explaining how her maid had left without warning the night before, and how she had made all the preparations herself, getting a girl at the last minute to help with the serving. Her face was flushed, her hair wispy, and she had the uneasy air of a woman whose thoughts are in the kitchen.

Where was Elaine? . . . Here was Cynthia Carbax, with a little horse-tail of hair in the back, telling how she had rushed over from a Red Cross sewing group; here was Maude Potterby, with stubby broken nails and no polish, relating how she was adapting herself in a maidless household to the presence of a war bride daughter and young baby; here was Myra Joyner, with her hair in a knot, promoting plans for the postwar world; here was Sue Marsh, with a girdle that frankly rode up in front, boasting of the canned goods she got from her victory garden; here was Nita Hack, with seam twisted hose and a glow in her face, recounting her hectic Christmas shopping for wounded soldiers. Why everyone looked vaguely different . . . a little more casual, a little more down to earth, a little more softened, a little more human.

THEN she saw Elaine gliding ceremoniously toward the hostess. It was the old familiar picture—the starkly simple dark dress, the striking little hat, the masked, unlived-in face, the beauty shop coiffure, the perfectly manicured hands, the lacquered personality. For a moment she felt as if Elaine were unreal, had stepped out of a dream. How could anybody be so invariable, so static? How could anybody garbed so completely in today's habiliments belong so completely to yesterday? It almost seemed strange to find Elaine speaking, moving among the guests as if she were alive.

"You know," remarked Bett Jeepers at her elbow, "sometimes I think Elaine Whiffle is so perfect she really looks cheap."

Cedar-Chest Care

Should any of the oil of the cedar wood form on the surface of metal fittings inside the red cedar chest, it can be easily removed with alcohol or benzine.

The luster of highly finished red cedar chests and pianos is best maintained by simply dusting the surface with a dry cloth.

Storage Technique

Before storing clothes in a cedar chest they should be well brushed and aired in the sun. In this way, any moth larvae lurking in the seams or pockets will be done away with.

It is best never to wrap the clothes in newspaper. Contact with cedar tends to make printer's ink run and stain.

War Worker Needs Proper Food Daily

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Keeping the war worker fit and on the job is about 50 per cent a medical problem. The other 50 per cent is half good pay, pleasant working conditions and considerate treatment—let's call this 50 per cent psychology.

About 50 to 75 per cent of the medical contribution to the fitness and efficiency of the war worker is to get enough food into him. And the proper kind of food at the right time.

The industrial management might take a leaf from the experience of school authorities. I quote from an article by F. M. Faught, in the "Saturday Evening Post."

School Lunches

"The first semester that hot lunches were served in one Indiana school, the 113 pupils gained half a ton in weight; soaking up vitamins and body-building foods that kids seldom find in paper bags and lunch pails.

In a Minnesota school, three weeks after a similar program assured identical, nourishing meals for every youngster, a student policemen assigned to the cafeteria turned in his badge. 'More food, no fights,' he told the principal."

American home life today is so uncertain about the regularity and the preparation of meals that the question of the nutrition of the worker as well as the school child must be taken up by the authorities concerned in keeping up their efficiency.

In some industrial plants committees have been formed to see that the workers, male and female, get a sound diet.

Preserving Vitamins

If a worker started out with a high protein breakfast—meat, eggs, milk—he lasted longer in the day without fatigue than on a starchy breakfast.

Vitamins are, of course, necessary for keeping the worker going.

The best way to get vitamins is from food. Whoever is doing the home cooking is reminded that:

The Vitamin Enemies are:

Water, heat and air.

The Vitamin Defenses and Preservers are:

Use little or no water.

Bring to steam quickly and do not boil violently.

Cook in covered utensils.

Do not stir.

End up the day with a light meal, but not too light. Don't forget that the potato is American born and that this country was literally hacked out of the wilderness on meat and potatoes. Potatoes pep up low-point meat, such as pork, neck bones, baked pork feet, kidneys, liver, pot roast, and grilled liver sausage-urgers. All go well with spuds, properly cooked.

MONTY WOLF, dually noted as an ex-husband of Gertrude Lawrence of "Lady in the Dark," and as an ironical humorist and tunesmith, will open at Trade Winds on Wednesday. This is his first visit to Washington since his engagement at the Capital Theater last spring. Also joining the Trade Winds show are Don Starr and Lyn Francis, dancers from Chicago's Edgewater Beach Hotel.

Johnny Valentine, brilliant guitarist, who appeared in Washington a couple of seasons ago, has joined the "South Seas Strings" group a the Neptune Room.

NEW GIRLY SHOWS. The Lotus unveils another razzle-dazzle revue today. It's headed by the Four Esquires, harmonizing vocalists, and dancers Dario and Estelle. The pretty Lotus Belles have a new series of swing and picture dances. . . . The Casino Royal show, starting today, will feature the Vee Ames Girls, the tap stepping Byrnes Sisters and juggling Lou Myers with Jimmy Kane, singing emcee, presiding over the doings.

"MAIRZIE DOATS," unless all signs fail, will be the successor of "Pistol Packin' Mamma," though it's more in the style of "Three Little Fishies" or that dratted "River Rolla-Brolla." What the maestro say about "Mairzie" is frightful—but they're all going to play it. Our first news of this double-talk opus came from Eddie O'Hearn in the Congo Room. Then it turned out that Eddie Camden's band in the Metronome Room was in the throes of rehearsing the thing. Dropping into Treasure Island we found Leo Dryer surveying a sheet of music with glazing eyes. Yes, it was "Mairzie Doats" and we couldn't believe the lyrics even after we read them. At the victory Room Tony Pastor said, "I'll never be able to remember the words. But so what? I can always make noises." . . . The title, "Mairzie Doats," is a song writer's idea of how to spell "Mares Eat Oats."

Al Norton has now been cutting up at the Merryland for two years. The customers still insist on his singing "Ace in the Hole" every night, vow they want him to stay until he grows a long, gray beard.

PEOPLE IN PLACES. Radio people always seem to be parked in Lounge Riviera. Parke Simmons, presidential announcer, and Bill Brooks, head of the NBC news department, were chatting with Pete Macias the other night . . . Col. Walter Bayler, USMC, who wears six star studded decorations, visited Burt's Trans-Lux. He didn't like to talk about battles, but mentioned that Wake Island was a pretty hot place . . . Lovely Dardanelle, who used to lead her own band in Mayfair, visited there lately.

'Policing' The World

By Roger W. Babson

Political Outlook Discussed

I am much interested in President Roosevelt's plea that we forget the "New Deal" until after election next November. The general belief is that he is saying this at the urgent demands of certain Southern and other Democrats who fear defeat. My hunch is that Winston Churchill has begged him to change his tune. Churchill is tremendously anxious for Roosevelt's reelection to a fourth term and has been giving him some good economic advice.

Both Roosevelt and Churchill know there may be a terrific unemployment problem both in the United States and throughout the British Commonwealth after World War II. Churchill argues that the governments of these nations cannot then continue their present "middle-of-the-road" policy of trying to please both leftists and rightists. He believes that the returning soldiers will insist upon employment, but that to give such means either taking the present shackles off employers and investors, or else following Russia and making our industries state-owned. There can be no half-way compromise.

Naturally, President Roosevelt does not like such device, but he has great confidence in Churchill. Roosevelt is a great compromiser and has hoped to bring us out of postwar unemployment by continuing to play to employers, labor leaders and consumers. Churchill, however, insists that such a course is suicidal. Apparently, Roosevelt is, at the moment, taking Churchill's advice; but whether Rocsevelt will continue to do so after November 6 is a different question.

Another factor bothering the New Dealers is the desire of both the drafted and enlisted men to get back to their homes and their old jobs at the earliest possible moment after Germany and/or Japan collapses. None of our men want to remain abroad to police the world. Furthermore, Roosevelt naturally is fearful of leaving the policing job to Great Britain and Russia to do. Hence, it looks just now as if "policing-the-world" is out of the window and that the Washington bureaucrats will have to provide jobs at home in the United States for the one million men they have been planning to leave abroad.

Here is another reason that is knocking this "policing-the-world" idea sky-high. The only thing necessary to prevent Germany, Japan and Italy from rearming is to ration the amount of iron, coal, oil and other essential raw materials which these countries must import in order to rearm. This cannot be accomplished by treaties or agreements as such would develop great international bootlegging enterprises which would surely lead to another war. Hence, the only practical means of rationing these raw materials would be to police Sweden, France, Arabia, Brazil and other neutral nations. In other words, the victorious nations need policing instead of the vanquished nations!

My own guess is that Russia will dominate and protect all east of Germany, while England will dominate all west of Germany and that both England and Russia will have free access to the North Atlantic, to the Mediterranean and to the Indian Ocean. Through agreeing to protect Holland, Belgium and France, England will indirectly get control of the Dutch East Indies and the African colonies of Belgium and France. The United States will get nothing but the privilege of paying the bills!

I do not feel badly to have the above happen. It may be best in the long run for us to leave the Eastern Hemisphere to Russia and the British Commonwealth with one proviso: This is that we insist on free and open markets in Asia, Africa and South America for our products. To the extent these markets are necessary to keep our people employed, they must never be shut against us. Secretary Hull has the right solution for the postwar employment problem.

The greatest statesman in the United States is Cordell Hull. He alone holds the key both to world peace and postwar employment. I wish he might be elected President in November. Otherwise, if Mr. Roosevelt insists unon running, perhaps Mr. Hull would consider being Vice President AND Secretary of State. There is no reason why he could not hold both offices. Then, whether Roosevelt resigned or continued in office, the country would be safe so long as Secretary Hull is at the helm.

P. S. Readers are asking, "What are the chances of government ownership of the railroads after the War?" My answer is that most investors would probably welcome it, but the decision will rest with organized labor. I don't know what labor will want.

Bergdoll Due To Quit Prison Life in Month

Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, the wealthy draft evader of World War I whose exploits brought him international notoriety, will be released from the Army Disciplinary Barracks, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., in about a month, provided his behavior continues good for that period.

A War Department official said last night that Bergdoll's time off from a seven-year sentence for good behavior would bring his release automatically a month hence. The prisoner has served about 4 years and 10 months of his sentence for desertion and draft evasion.

Wife Is Elated

The Associated Press reported that at Downingtown, Pa., in the rolling farm country outside Philadelphia, Mrs. Berta Bergdoll, his wife, said, "I'm glad he's on his way home at last." She and their six children, Alfred, 15; Emma, 13; Mina, 12; Erwin, 9; Vega, 7, and Berta, 5, have been living on a 260-acre farm purchased in 1940.

GROVER CLEVELAND BERGDOLL

Mrs. Bergdoll said she expected her husband to join her at the farm, but did not know exactly when. Asked if he would operate the farm, she replied:

"You'll have to ask him when he gets here. I cannot speak for him."

Bergdoll's aged mother, residing on an adjoining farm, could not be reached for comment. A woman at the elder Mrs. Bergdoll's home, who identified herself as Bergdoll's sister-in-law, said she knew nothing of the War Department report, and declined to comment.

Way Cleared in 1941

The way for Bergdoll's eventual release was cleared in October, 1941, when the United States District Court at Philadelphia nolle prossed all criminal indictments pending against him. Some of the indictments had been on file more than 20 years.

An Army court-martial in 1919 sentenced Bergdoll to five years in prison, but en route to recover a "pot of gold" he said he had hidden in the mountains of western Maryland he escaped from guards and later fled to Germany.

There in 1926 he married the blond daughter of a German city official. He remained in Germany until 1939 when, on the eve of another world war, he returned to the United States and surrendered. The youngest Bergdoll child was born in the United States.

Mrs. Grover Bergdoll received her first citizenship papers in 1941.
